

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE TO THIRD EDITION. .

In this edition thirty pages of new exercises have been added. These are based upon the text of Herodotus and Lysias, the reference being printed before each exercise. It is taken for granted that students will have the Greek text of these authors either during or before their Freshman year. Although there are obvious advantages in translating into Greek and Latin in connection with the text of the original, it is difficult to attain to much freedom of expression without introducing some words not found in the text. The experiment is therefore made in these exercises (Nos. LXXI.-C.) of combining the Greek text with the words already found in the vocabularies, adding, where necessary, an occasional word in the foot-notes.

It is hoped that this compromise will commend itself. Where the Greek original has been more closely followed it was desired to concentrate attention upon change from direct to indirect discourse, dialectic peculiarities, etc.

Although Herodotus has been selected primarily because so generally read, the transference of Ionic to Attic may perhaps be justified, if it be necessary, by an appeal to Dionysius of Halicarnassus (De Comp. Verb. iii. and iv.).

The book has been revised throughout.

The references to Goodwin's Grammar have been altered to conform to the new edition (1893).

PREFACE TO SECOND EDITION.

The unexpected necessity of issuing a second edition of this book within a year of its publication, and at short notice, has precluded any material change or addition.

Some oversights, omissions, and obscurities have been noticed, and changes made accordingly.

As the term "Articular Infinitive" may be new to some who use the book, the author refers to Professor Gildersleeve's original discussion of the subject in the "Transactions of the American Philological Association," 1878, and in the "American Journal of Philology," Vol. III. p. 193, etc.

A few references have been inserted to Professor Goodwin's invaluable new edition (1890) of the "Greek Moods and Tenses."

The author wishes to express his thanks to Professor Gildersleeve for his criticism of the present edition, and also to Professor M. W. Humphreys of the University of Virginia.

P R E F A C E.

THIS book has grown out of the author's personal experience in the class-room. It is for use in writing connected Greek prose, and is intended to be used weekly, or semi-weekly, parallel with the daily recitations in reading Xenophon and other authors.

There is pre-supposed on the part of the student a knowledge of the forms of the language and of the principal parts of the more common irregular verbs. If he knows these, he will not have to refer to any other book in preparing his exercises. References are given, however, throughout the introductory matter to the grammars of Goodwin and of Hadley & Allen, and from them some of the examples have been taken without further acknowledgment.

The 'Notes' on idiomatic uses of article, participle, etc., will, it is hoped, be useful to all students. The introduction to Syntax includes the most essential peculiarities in the use of the Moods and Tenses. The study of this part may, at the discretion of the teacher, be postponed for use in connection with Part II. of the exercises. Attention is especially called to the 'Table of Syntax,' pp. 58-61. It is intended for frequent reference after the preceding sections have been studied.

The 'Rules for Cases' are added, because the author believes that the student should be required to commit to memory the main uses of the cases with examples.

The 'Rules of Accent,' it is hoped, will stimulate students to the mastery of what is often neglected as a too difficult or unnecessary task. The large print should be learned first and the foot-notes afterwards as fast as interest is excited. It can now no longer be urged by teachers that the study of accent may be neglected by the student without detriment to the quality of his work. Recent publications on the subject emphasize the organic connection of the accent with word formation and lead to the hope of still further developments in the future.

The exercises in Part I. are to be written in connection with the 'Special Vocabularies.'¹

It is recommended that the student commit these to memory, one at a time, in connection with the exercises on the respective subjects. If this is done, extra oral exercises upon them may easily be made in the class-room. Nos. I. and III. (end) are in-suggested as suggestions for oral work. The necessary baldness of the matter may be overlooked if it serves to fix in the memory a nucleus of a vocabulary and to give a little freedom in expressing even simple sentences in Greek.

Part II. of the exercises is somewhat more difficult, and has copious references to the Syntax. The exercises are based on selections from Greek authors, partly with the intention of giving the young student a slight introduction to the subject matter of various writers.

Part III. is for more advanced students, and is less freely annotated. The original passages, in this part, may with advantage be indicated to the student for parallel reading to familiarize him with the style and vocabulary of the Greek authors.

The 'General Vocabulary' includes all the words used in the three parts, except expressions given in notes and those in the 'Special Vocabularies': the latter, however, are referred to in each instance. The present indicative of verbs is usually given, but the present infinitive is preferred sometimes, e.g. to distinguish between παρῆναι and παρίεναι. The aorist tense in best use is sometimes added; and in deponent verbs the aorist in use, whether middle or passive, is usually given. (See Veitch, 'Greek Verbs Irregular and Defective.')

The author wishes to acknowledge that his use of Sidgwick's 'Greek Prose Composition' has suggested the elaboration of the 'Table of Syntax' and of some other features of this book.

He takes pleasure also in acknowledging the kind assistance and suggestions of Mr. George G. Carey, of Baltimore, and of Prof. Edw. H. Spieker, of the Johns Hopkins University, in the revision of portions of the manuscript.

In connection with a subject hitherto so much neglected, it may be worth while to mention some of the works most frequently used in preparing the sections on Accent. For some of the rules the author alone is responsible.

GREEK PROSE COMPOSITION.

NOTES ON IDIOM AND SYNTAX.

§ 1. Conjunctions and Particles in Independent Sentences (H. §§ 1036-1051).

For temporal conjunctions, etc., used in dependent clauses, see § 51.

IN writing connected Greek prose, the first thing necessary to notice is the use of the conjunctions and connective particles. In English, sentences often follow each other abruptly without connecting particles. In Greek this is seldom the case. Thus, in beginning a story, we say: 'There was once.' The Greek often says: ἦν γάρ ποτε, 'for there was once.'

It will therefore be a safe rule in writing Greek, always to begin each clause with a conjunction or particle. Often there will be more than one.

In the English exercises which follow, this peculiarity of the Greek will be largely taken for granted, so that the student will have to insert the proper particles and conjunctions. Some of these particles cannot stand first in a clause, but must come after one or more words; e. g. Ξενοφῶν οὖν: οὗτοι δέ. The sign † will be prefixed to these postpositive words in the list given below.

Caution: The conjunction is suppressed when one of two finite verbs is translated into Greek by a participle.

'But Xenophon interrupted him in the midst (and) said as follows,' ὁ μάλιστα Ξενοφῶν μεταξύ ὑπολαβὼν ἔλεξεν ὧδε, Anab. III. i. 27. With this compare —

'Cleanor rose (and) said as follows,' Κλεάνωρ ἀνέστη καὶ ἔλεξεν ὧδε, Anab. III. ii. 3; this latter might have been written Κλεάνωρ ἀναστὰς ἔλεξεν ὧδε.

The most common connectives are those meaning and, but, for. These and a few other common words are given in § 2.

In reading Greek the student should always notice the connection of sentences. If he would make a list of conjunctions and particles in a few pages of Greek previously read, he would soon form the habit and gradually familiarize himself even with the more difficult ones.

§ 2. Particles and Conjunctions used in Independent Sentences.

And; καί, † δέ (less often enclitic † τε).

But; ἀλλά, † δέ (with or without † μὲν in a preceding clause).

Therefore; † οὖν, † τοίνυν, ὥστε.

Yet; however; † μάλιστα.

For; † γάρ.

Also; even; καί.

Not even ; οὐδέ.

And not (after a negative clause) ; οὐδέ.

Not . . . nor ; οὐ(κ) . . . οὐδέ.

Neither . . . nor ; οὔτε . . . οὔτε.

When μή is the proper negative (see § 18), use μήτε, μηδέ, etc.

It will be noticed that these Greek words have more than one translation.

† μέν . . . † δέ are used to contrast words and clauses. With them the article is often equivalent to a pronoun. 'Indeed;' 'on the one hand . . . on the other,' are generally awkward, and over-translate the idea. They may often be rendered into English by emphasizing the words to which they are attached.

ὁ μὲν οὐδέν, ὁ δὲ πολλὰ κερδαίνει, 'one man gains nothing, another (gains) much.'

τοτὲ μὲν . . . τοτὲ δέ, 'at one time . . . at another.'

ὁ μὲν οὕτως εἶπεν· ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ Τισσαφέρνης, 'he spoke thus, but Tissaphernes when he heard,' Anab. II. iii. 24.

It must be noticed that μέν does not connect its clause with what precedes, but looks forward to what follows. Therefore some other particle (like οὖν) is needed with it to connect the sentence with what goes before: e. g. οἱ μὲν οὖν πρῶτοι, Anab. II. ii. 17.

ὁ δέ is often used meaning 'and he,' 'but he,' without preceding ὁ μὲν.

δή is one of the most frequent particles, and at the same time one of the most difficult to render. It may imply simply a gesture, an intonation of the voice, or the emphasis of another word. It often gives to conjunctions an ironical force. It may sometimes be rendered 'accordingly,' 'so then,' 'now,' 'you see,' 'in particular,' 'in truth.' Cf. H. § 1037.

ἀλλά means 'but,' or, in beginning a speech or sentence, 'well!' 'why!'

καί means 'and,' 'also,' 'even.'

† δέ means 'and,' 'but.'

† γάρ means 'for,' 'since.' It often implies something easily inferred from the context: (yes) 'for'; (no) 'for,' etc. This is especially frequent with καὶ γάρ and ἀλλὰ γάρ, as, Soph., O. T., 338, 339: —

(TEIP.) . . . ἐμὲ ψέγεις.

(ΟΙΑ.) τίς γὰρ . . . οὐκ ἂν ὀργίζοιτο; -

TEIRESIAS. ' . . . You blame me.'

OEDIPUS. (Yes, I do, or, I do indeed), 'for who would not grow angry?'

καὶ γὰρ καὶ καπνὸς ἐφαίνετο, 'and' (they knew the king was near,) 'for smoke also appeared,' Anab. II. ii. 15. καὶ γὰρ δὴ ἔως μὲν πόλεμος ἦν, 'and' (this is clear,) 'for while there was war,' II. vi. 2. καὶ γὰρ οὖν φιλία μὲν ἐπομένους οὐδέποτε εἶχεν, 'and' (this was natural,) 'for he had none following him from friendship,' II. vi. 13.

ἀλλὰ γὰρ καὶ περαίνειν ἤδη ὦρα, 'but' (enough of talk,) 'for it is now time also to be doing,' Anab. III. ii. 32.

To introduce dependent clauses, use the regular temporal and causal conjunctions meaning when, while, since, before, because, etc. (see §§ 48 and 51), or use genitive absolute or other participial forms.

§ 3. THE ARTICLE.

There is no indefinite article in Greek. English a (an) must therefore usually be omitted in translating; e.g. ποταμός, 'a river.' The indefinite τις (quidam) is used when the author has in mind some particular person or thing, but does not name it; e.g. γυνή τις ὄρνιν εἶχεν, 'a (certain) woman had a hen.'

The Definite Article, English 'the.' (G. §§ 941 ff.

H. § 656 ff.)

The student who has learned to dispense with the definite article in Latin must be cautioned to return to English usage and regularly translate 'the' by ὁ, ἡ, τό.

Some peculiarities of omission and usage may be noted.

(a) Class-names (generic) and Abstract Nouns often take the article; e.g. 'man,' ὁ ἄνθρωπος or οἱ ἄνθρωποι, 'virtue,' ἡ ἀρετή, 'justice,' ἡ δικαιοσύνη.

(b) With Proper Names the article may be omitted just as in English: Κύρος, 'Cyrus,' Ξενοφῶν, 'Xenophon;' but it is often used, especially to mark them as 'the well-known,' or 'the above-mentioned.' ὁ Σωκράτης, 'Socrates' (the well-known).

(c) The definite article is generally used where we employ the possessive his, hers, etc., provided the connection is clear; e. g. ἔρχεται πρὸς τὸν πατέρα, 'she comes to her father.'

§ 4. Position of the Article. (G. §§ 959-980.

H. §§ 666-668).

(a) Attributive position. When a noun has any limiting word, whether an adjective or a genitive, the definite article, if used at all, must immediately precede, not the noun, but the limiting genitive, adjective, or adverb.

Hence we can say, ὁ κακὸς ἀνὴρ, ὁ ἀνὴρ ὁ κακός, ἀνὴρ ὁ κακός, all meaning 'the bad man.'

The three positions are given above in the order of their frequency.

ἡ ἐπὶ τὴν ἀκρόπολιν φέρουσα ὁδός, ἡ ὁδὸς ἡ ἐπὶ τὴν ἀκρόπολιν φέρουσα, 'the road leading to the Acropolis.'

αἱ μεγάλαι πόλεις, ἢ (αἱ) πόλεις αἱ μεγάλαι, 'the large cities.'

οἱ ἐνδοθεν ὀπλῖται, 'the hoplites within.'

Often the second position is more natural with an explanatory word or phrase.

οἱ ὀπλῖται οἱ ἐνδοθεν, i. e. 'the ones who are within.'

So above, ἡ ὁδὸς ἡ, etc., 'the one which leads.'

(b) Predicate position. G. § 142, 3. H. § 670.

If the article is placed directly before the noun, and there only, the meaning is changed, and the adjective is predicated of the noun. Thus:

κακὸς ὁ ἀνὴρ, or ὁ ἀνὴρ κακός, means 'the man is bad.'

The position is the same whether a copula is used or not.

ἦσαν αἱ Ἴωνικαὶ πόλεις Τισσαφέρνους, 'the Ionian cities were Tissaphernes's.'

But ἦσαν αἱ Τισσαφέρνους πόλεις Ἴωνικαί, 'Tissaphernes's cities were Ionian.'

Attributive position.

ὁ σοφὸς ἀνὴρ
ὁ ἀνὴρ ὁ σοφός ἀνὴρ ὁ σοφός

} 'the wise man.'

Predicate position.

ὁ ἀνὴρ σοφός
σοφὸς ὁ ἀνὴρ

} 'the man is wise.'

All dependent genitives (except the personal pronouns and partitives) may be put in the attributive position. G. § 960. H. § 666, a, b, c.

ὁ ἐμὸς πατήρ or ὁ πατήρ ὁ ἐμός, 'my father.'

τὸν ἐμαντοῦ πατέρα or τὸν πατέρα τὸν ἐμαντοῦ, 'my own father.'

οἱ τῶν Θεβαίων στρατηγοί or οἱ στρατηγοὶ οἱ τῶν Θεβαίων (also the predicate position, οἱ στρατηγοὶ τῶν Θεβαίων), 'the Theban generals.'

The personal pronouns, however, must have the predicate position, e. g. ὁ πατήρ μου, or μοῦ ὁ πατήρ, 'my father.'

αὐτοῦ ἡ οἰκία, 'his (ejus) house' (but ἡ ἐαυτοῦ οἰκία, 'his own (sua) house').

So also with partitives the predicate position is used, e. g. ὁ ἡμισυς τοῦ ἀριθμοῦ, 'the half of the number.'

(c) With Demonstrative Pronouns. Nouns usually require the article with οὗτος, ἐκεῖνος, and ὅδε. The pronoun then has the predicate position, e. g. οὗτος ὁ ἀνὴρ, 'this man.' G. §§ 974, 975. H. § 673.

(d) The adjectives μέσος, 'middle of;' ἄκρος, 'top of;' ἔσχατος, 'last of;' take the predicate position.

μέση ἡ πόλις, 'the middle of the city.' G. § 978, 1, and 2. H. § 671.

(e) αὐτός in the attributive position means 'same;' in the predicate position it means 'self.'

ὁ αὐτὸς ἀνὴρ or ὁ ἀνὴρ ὁ αὐτός, 'the same man;' τὰ αὐτά (= ταῦτά), 'the same things.'

αὐτὸς ὁ ἀνὴρ, 'the man himself.'

§ 5. Article with Adjectives. (G. §§ 932, 933.

H. §§ 621, 622.)

In English we often use with the definite article an adjective alone, leaving the noun understood, e. g. the gay, the young, the good. In Greek also this is very frequent with all genders.

οἱ πολλοί, 'the many;' τὰ ἐπιτήδεια, 'necessaries;' οἱ σοφοί, 'the wise.'

The neuter adjective and article often form an abstract noun: τὸ πονηρόν, 'evil' (cf. ὁ πονηρός, 'the evil one').

So τὸ ἀληθές, 'the true,' 'truth' (= ἀλήθεια).

Sometimes the article is omitted, τὸ μέσον or μέσον, 'the middle;' (τὰ ἀγαθὰ, bona).

§ 6. Article with Participles. (G. § 1560. H. § 966.)

In like manner the participle with the article is used as a noun. The beginner should learn to use this freely. It is especially convenient in translating relative clauses.

ὁ λύσας, 'he who loosed.'

ὁ λυσάμενος, 'he who ransomed.'

ὁ λυθείς, 'he who was released.'

ὁ λελυμένος, 'he who has been set at liberty.'

ὁ λύσων, 'he who is to release.'

ἐπὶ τούτων τῶν ἐλεφάντων τῶν μάλιστα χειροσθῶν (sc. ὄντων),
'(they mount) upon those elephants which are especially well broken.'

τὰ γιγνόμενα, 'those things which are going on;' τὰ γεγενημένα, 'the things which have happened.'

§ 7. Article with Adverbs and Phrases. (G. § 952.
H. § 600.)

Adverbs and limiting phrases, such as prepositions and their cases, may be used with the article and noun. The noun may be, and frequently is, omitted, just as in the case of the article with adjectives or participles.

Χειρίσσοφος καὶ οἱ σὺν ἐκείνῳ (στρατιῶται), 'Chirisophus and those with him.'

οἱ ἄνω πολέμιοι, 'the enemy who are above.'

οἱ ἔμπροσθεν, 'those in front.'

ὑπὸ τῶν ὀπισθεν, 'by those in the rear.'

τοῖς δὲ παρ' ἐαυτῷ παρήγγειλεν, 'he gave orders to those with him,' Anab. IV. iii. 29 (here some word like στρατιώταις is easily supplied).

οἱ δὲ ἄνω . . . ἐκλείπουνσι τὰ ὑπὲρ τοῦ ποταμοῦ ἄκρα, 'the (enemy) above abandon the heights above the river,' Anab. IV. iii. 23.

Here πολέμιοι is easily supplied from ἐπὶ τοὺς ἄνω πολεμίους in the preceding sentence, while ἄκρα might have been omitted, leaving τὰ ὑπὲρ τοῦ ποταμοῦ, 'the (parts) above the river.' So in the next section τὰ πέραν, 'matters on the other side of the river.'

§ 8. The neuter article may be put before any part of speech or combination of words, and thus make a temporary neuter noun.

τὸ Ξέρξης, 'the word Xerxes.'

τὸ εἰ βούλει, 'the expression if you will.'

τὸ πόλεως προπαροξύνεται, 'the word πόλεως is proparoxytone.' G. § 955, 2. H. § 600 (a).

Caution. Never use the article alone to express he, him, she, her, etc. This is a mistake often made because the beginner has seen οἱ μέν, 'these;' οἱ δέ, 'those.' With these particles the article may be so used, and ὁ δέ, 'and he,' may be used without a preceding ὁ μὲν. So also ὁ μὲν may be followed by something else than ὁ δέ as a contrast.

§ 9. (a) PRONOUNS. Demonstrative; Personal; Reflexive.

The personal endings of the verb serve for the unemphatic English pronouns in the nominative case; the oblique cases of αὐτός (or of ὁ μὲν, ὁ δέ) translate the pronouns of the third person when not in the nominative. G. § 989, 3. H. §§ 261 ff., 677 ff.

When greater emphasis is required, the appropriate pronouns of the first and second persons and ὁ μὲν, ἡ μὲν, οἱ δέ, etc., are employed.

To give demonstrative meaning we use οὗτος, ὅδε, or ἐκεῖνος. Of these, οὗτος and ὅδε, 'this,' generally refer to what is near; ἐκεῖνος, 'that,' refers to what is more remote.

Notice that οὗτος is the regular antecedent of the relative pronoun.

Difference between οὗτος and ὅδε. οὗτος (τοιούτος, οὕτως, etc.) often refers to something just said, while ὅδε (τοιόσδε, ὡςδε, etc.) refers to what follows, e. g. ταῦτ' εἶπεν, 'thus he spoke;' but τάδε εἶπεν, 'he spoke as follows.'

οὗτος was often used colloquially in direct address.

οὗτος, τί ποιεῖς; 'you there! what are you doing?'

οὗτος, οὐπὶ τοῦ τέγους, κατάβαινε, 'you there on the roof! come down!' cf. Ar. Nubes, 1502.

‘I saw her,’ εἶδον αὐτήν. ‘I saw her myself,’ αὐτὸς εἶδον αὐτήν.

‘He struck him,’ ἐπάταξεν αὐτόν. ‘She struck herself,’ ἐπάταξεν αὐτήν.

‘His head,’ ἡ κεφαλὴ αὐτοῦ. ‘His own head,’ τὴν ἑαυτοῦ κεφαλὴν.

‘Their house,’ αὐτῶν ἡ οἰκία. ‘These ran, those fought it out,’ οἱ μὲν ἀπέδραμον, οἱ δὲ ἀπεμάχοντο.

‘He smiled and said,’ ὁ δὲ γελάσας εἶπεν.

§ 10. Relative Pronouns. A relative pronoun agrees with its antecedent in gender and number. Its case depends on the construction of its own clause. If the relative is the subject, the verb takes the person of the antecedent.

Assimilation or Attraction. A very common Greek idiom is the changing of the relative from the accusative case to the case of the antecedent, if the latter happens to be in the genitive or dative.

τῶν στρατιωτῶν ὧν ἔχει (for οὓς ἔχει), ‘some of the soldiers whom he has.’

τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς οἷς ἔχομεν (for ἃ ἔχομεν), ‘with the good things which we have.’

This is called assimilation or attraction of case. The antecedent, when easily supplied, may be omitted; it is then represented by its case only.

ἦσθη οἷς εἶδε (as if τούτοις ἃ εἶδε), ‘he was pleased with what he saw.’ G. §§ 1031–1033. H. §§ 993 ff.

§ 11. ‘That’ in English.

The beginner must be on his guard in translating the various uses of the word ‘that.’

1. ‘That man;’ a demonstrative pronoun, ἐκεῖνος.
2. ‘The book that I read;’ a relative pronoun, ὃς, ἥ, ὅ.

3. 'He said that Cyrus was slain;' either ὅτι (ὥς) + finite verb, or omit and use infinitive.

4. 'I know that I am blind;' ὅτι (ὥς) + finite verb, or omit and use nominative of participle.

5. 'He gave orders that Orontes should be killed;' omit and use infinitive.

6. 'He runs up that he may see;' ἵνα, ὅπως, (ὥς) + subjunctive or optative.

7. 'He runs so fast that he escapes;' (οὕτως) . . . ὥστε.

Examples: —

1. ἐκείνης τῆς γυναικός, 'of that woman.'

2. τὴν βίβλον ἣν ἀνέγνω, 'the book that I read.'

3. ἔλεγεν ὅτι (ὥς = 'how that') Κῦρος ἀπέθανεν (H.* ἀποθάνοι), or ἔλεγε Κῦρον ἀποθανεῖν, 'he said that Cyrus was killed.'

4. οἶδα ὅτι τυφλός εἰμι or οἶδα τυφλὸς ὢν, 'I know that I am blind.'

5. τοῦτον ἐκέλευσα πάντα σημαίνειν ἐμοί, 'I gave orders that this one should tell me all,' or 'I ordered him to tell.'

6. ἀποκτείνει με . . . ἵνα αὐτὸς τὸν χρυσὸν ἔχῃ (cf. Eur. Hec. 27), 'he slays me that he may himself have the gold.'

7. οὕτως ταχέως ἔτρεχεν ὥστε ἀπέφυγε, 'he ran so fast that he escaped.'

§ 12. Participles. (G. §§ 1557 ff. H. §§ 965-987.)

The student must learn to use the participle freely. While in Latin there are only two active and two passive participles, in Greek there is a full set (theoretically at least) in the active, middle, and passive. In Latin, e. g., victus means 'having been conquered,' and when it is necessary to say 'having conquered,' we must use some phrase like 'cum vicisset.' In Greek we can pass from tense to tense and voice to voice without changing from the participle to the finite verb; e. g. — νικῶν, 'conquering;,' νικώμενος, '(being) conquered.'

νικήσας, 'having conquered;,' νικηθείς, 'having been conquered;,' and so on.

It is worth while to remind the beginner here, as in the indicative mood, that the aorist will usually be the tense to employ for the English perfect unless completion is insisted upon; e. g. πενικημένος 'having been reduced to a state of subjection.'

§ 13. Participle with Article. (G. § 1560, 2.

Just as the infinitive is a verbal noun, so the participle is a verbal adjective. It may be used, therefore, like any other adjective to qualify a noun.

This is natural and easily understood. But the next step needs much more emphasis. As the article and adjective stand for a noun, so may the article with the participle, the noun being omitted in both instances. The combination is equivalent to 'he who' and a finite verb. Examples of this have already been given in § 6.

§ 14. Participle alone.

We come now to the participle without noun or article.

(a) Let the beginner clearly understand that the participle will usually require, or at least admit of, something more than mere tense translations like 'being,' 'having.' He will often have to add to his translation some word like 'when,' 'because,' 'since,' 'although,' 'if,' 'in order that.' The same thought may also be expressed by various conjunctions with the appropriate finite verb, but the participle is often much more convenient, whether under the form of the genitive absolute or any other case to which the participle is attached. E. g. (accusative case): —

'He impaled him (when) dead,' αὐτὸν τεθνηκότα ἀνεσταύρωσεν.

So in dative case, 'they get upon the elephants as they lie there,' ἐπιβαίνουνσι τοῖς ἐλέφασιν κειμένοις.

(b) In English phrases like 'by doing this he saved her' (τοῦτο ποιῶν αὐτὴν ἔσωσεν), it is natural to think of a preposition, or at least some case other than the nominative, as a translation for 'by,' 'with,' 'in,' etc. But if the habit is formed of examining the real connection, the construction will be clear at a glance.

CAUTION. On the other hand, some phrases containing 'from . . . -ing,' or 'of . . . -ing,' must not be translated by the participle, but by the infinitive or some other construction.

'Nothing will prevent you from flinging yourself into the Barathrum,' οὐδέν σε κωλύσει σεαυτὸν ἐμβαλεῖν ἐς τὸ βάραθρον, Ar. Nub. 1449. 'They are also afraid of falling off,' φοβοῦνται καὶ τὸ καταπεσεῖν, Anab. III. ii. 19. 'He was afraid of being arrested,' ἐδεδοίκει μὴ συλληφθεῖν. Cf. Isoc. 17, 22. See also § 52 (end).

§ 15. Below are given examples of some of the most common attendant circumstances and relations defined by the participle, such as Time, Cause, Condition, Limitation, and (in future) Purpose. G. § 1563, notes. H. §§ 965-987.

1. Time. English 'when,' 'as,' 'while,' 'after (that).'

(Nom.) After they had selected men they send them,' καὶ ἄνδρας ἐλόμενοι πέμπουσι, Anab. I. iii. 20. Loosely rendered by the present participle in English.

'When he had done this he crossed over,' ταῦτα δὲ ποιήσας διέβαινε, I. iv. 17.

(Acc.) 'He saw me as I was passing by,' εἶδέν με παριόντα.

(Gen. and Dat.) 'He despised him while he was absent and reviled him when he was present,' τούτου μὲν κατεφρόνει ἀπόντος, παρόντι δὲ ἐλοιδορεῖτο.

(Dat.) 'And there ran up to Xenophon while he was breakfasting a couple of young men,' καὶ ἀριστῶντι τῷ Ξενοφῶντι προσέτρεχον δύο νεανίσκω, Anab. IV. iii. 10; cf. ff.

2. Cause, manner, means. English, 'because,' 'by,' etc.

'I weep for them because they are involved in misfortune,' κείνους δὲ κλαίω συμφορᾷ κεχρημένους.

3. Accompaniment. English, 'with.'

This is often translated by using the participles ἔχων, λαβών, ἄγων, φέρων, χρώμενος.

'He came with (i. e. bringing) the money,' ἦλθε φέρων τὸ ἀργύριον.

4. Condition. (Negative μή.) Translated 'if.'

The protasis of a conditional sentence is often represented by a participle.

'But you will soon know, if you listen,' σὺ δὲ κλύων (= εἰὰν κλύης) εἴσει τάχα (G. § 1413).

So too the genitive absolute.

'If they should conquer they would kill nobody, but if they should be defeated not one of them would survive,' νικῶντες μὲν οὐδένα ἂν κατακάνοιεν, ἡττηθέντων δὲ αὐτῶν οὐδεὶς ἂν λειφθείη, Anab. III. i. 2.

In the following example there are two 'if' clauses expressed by participles, one by the genitive absolute (because the subject changes from 'I' to 'Cyrus') and the other by the nominative.

'I should wish, in case I went away against the will of Cyrus (if Cyrus were unwilling), to escape his notice in departing (or when I went off),' βουλοίμην δ' ἂν ἄκοντος ἀπὼν Κύρου λαθεῖν αὐτὸν ἀπελθών, Anab. I. iii. 17.

5. Concession or Limitation. English, 'although.'

Participle with or without καίπερ.

‘Although they fared ill they did not retreat, κακῶς πράττοντες, οὐκ ἀπεχώρησαν.

‘And they were not repulsed, although they suffered severely,’ καὶ οὐκ ἀπελαύνοντο καίπερ μεγάλως προσπταίοντες, Hdt. VII. 210.

6. Purpose. English, ‘to,’ ‘in order to.’

Purpose is expressed by the future participle and ὥς. With verbs of motion ὥς may be omitted.¹

‘He came to ransom his daughter,’ ἦλθε λυσόμενος θύγατρα, Il. I. 13.

‘And Æneas, when he saw a man with (or ‘wearing,’ ἔχων) a handsome robe running to throw himself over, took hold of him with the intention of stopping him,’ καὶ Αἰνέας . . . ἰδὼν τινα θέοντα ὥς ῥίψοντα ἑαυτόν, στολὴν ἔχοντα καλήν, ἐπιλαμβάνεται ὥς κωλύσων, Anab. IV. vii. 13.

ὥς with future participle often means ‘with apparent or avowed intention of,’ etc.

§ 16. Genitive Absolute.

It must be noticed that the use of the genitive absolute is not confined to any one of the meanings in § 15. It may denote any attendant circumstance; the advantage of using it is that it changes the subject without introducing a finite verb and conjunction.

ταῦτ’ ἐπράχθη Κόνωνος στρατηγοῦντος, ‘this was done when Conon was general;’ instead of ταῦτ’ ἐπράχθη ὅτε Κόνων ἐστρατήγει.

§ 17. (a) λανθάνω, τυγχάνω, and φθάνω with participle.

The translation of these verbs requires care.

A participle used with λανθάνω usually contains the leading idea of the sentence. This may also be the case with τυγχάνω and φθάνω.

The translation will vary; sometimes an adverb or phrase will best render the meaning; e. g.

λανθάνω, 'escape notice; ' 'unobserved.'

τυγχάνω, 'happen; ' 'as it chanced.'

φθάνω, 'anticipate; ' 'first; ' 'beforehand.'

Examples: —

'As it happened they were gathering fagots,' ἐτύγγανον φρύγανα συλλέγοντες, Anab. IV. iii. 11.

'As luck would have it, he was present,' παρὼν ἐτύγγανεν.

'They came first,' ἔφθασαν ἀφικόμενοι.

In Thuc. III. 112 all three verbs occur: 'Demosthenes's men captured beforehand and unobserved the larger hill, but the Ambraciots, as it happened, ascended first the smaller hill,' . . . τὸν μὲν μείζω [λόφον] . . . οἱ [τοῦ Δημοσθένους] . . . ἐλαθόν τε καὶ ἔφθασαν προκαταλαβόντες, τὸν δὲ ἐλάσσω ἔτυχον οἱ Ἀμπρακιῶται προαναβάντες.

οἵχομαι, 'am gone,' and διατελέω, 'continue,' are often used with a participle in a similar way.

'You have constantly been trying,' διετέλεσας πειρώμενος, Plato, Theaet. 206 A.

Notice also the use of the participle with παύομαι, ἥδομαι, χαίρω.

§ 18. Negatives οὐ and μή. (G. §§ 1607 ff. H. §§ 1018 ff.)

(What is here said of οὐ and μή applies also to their compounds οὐδέεις, οὐδέ, οὔτε, μηδέεις, etc.)

οὐ is the negative of simple assertion or question. Therefore it is found all through Group I., § 33, and also with the infinitive, optative, or participle representing the indicative.

It is always the negative in the apodosis of any conditional sentence, as the apodosis contains the assertion (but cf. note, p. 42).

μή is the negative of prohibition, wish, condition, conception.

It is therefore found in Groups II. and III. (see §§ 34 and 35), and always in the protasis of negative conditions and in indefinite sentences.

It is regularly used with the infinitive (except after words of saying and thinking; see § 53 ff.).

Participles expressing a condition, or when equivalent to an indefinite relative clause, take μή; otherwise the participle has οὐ.

Examples: —

οὐκ εἰδώς, 'since (etc.) he does not know.'

μή εἰδώς, 'if he does not know.'

With the article: —

οἱ οὐ δυνάμενοι, 'those who are unable.'

οἱ μὴ δυνάμενοι, 'any who are unable,' or 'whoever are unable.'

Cf. τὰ ὄντα τε ὡς ὄντα καὶ τὰ μὴ ὄντα ὡς οὐκ ὄντα, (he reported) 'facts as facts and whatever were not facts as not being facts;' Anab. IV. iv. 15.

§ 19. The Moods. (G. §§ 1317 ff. H. §§ 865 ff.)

The uses of the moods are more fully treated, page 34 ff.

Indicative. The indicative mood is used for simple statements, assertions, and questions (see Group I., § 33). Its tenses are explained, §§ 22 ff.

Subjunctive. The subjunctive in all tenses usually refers to the future.

Optative. This also usually refers to the future. The beginner should content himself with using the present and aorist tenses.

In independent sentences the optative has two uses:

1. (Without ἄν). Future wishes.
2. (With ἄν). The potential optative; or the apodosis of an ideal ('should') condition.

In dependent sentences: —

3. The optative may represent the subjunctive or indicative.

Infinitive. The infinitive is a verbal noun. It is not limited by person, number, etc. (√ finis, limit).

1. It may be used with the definite article declined in the neuter singular. This secures at the same time the privileges of a noun and the distinctions of tense, voice, etc. This is called The Articular Infinitive.

- N. A. τὸ λύειν, 'loosing.'
 G. τοῦ λύειν, 'of loosing.'
 D. τῷ λύειν, 'to, for, by, loosing.'

Cf. Lat. infinitive declined by aid of gerund, — amare, amandi, amando, etc. G. § 141, Note 6. H. § 959.

2. The infinitive may be used with or without the article as the subject or object of another verb.

3. It is used in Oratio Obliqua to represent the corresponding tense of some finite mood.

For other uses see Grammar.

Imperative. The imperative mood expresses commands.

§ 20. The Particle ἄν. (G. §§ 1299 ff. H. §§ 857 ff.)

The particle ἄν has two uses.

I. In independent sentences.

(a) With indicative (secondary tenses) in apodosis of unreal conditions.¹ ἄν is the only thing which distinguishes between the unreal and the simple past conditions.

εἶδεν αὐτὸν εἰ παρεγένετο, 'he saw him if he was there ;'
 but εἶδεν ἄν αὐτὸν εἰ παρεγένετο, 'he would have seen him if he had been there.'

¹ For the use of ἄν with imperfect or aorist indicative to denote customary action, see G § 206 ; H. § 835.

(b) With optative in apodosis of 'Should' conditions.

ἴδοις ἂν εἰ παρὰ γένοιτο, 'you would see if you should be present.'

Or in potential optative with the protasis merely implied; see § 33 b.

(c) In indirect discourse; see § 55.

2. In dependent sentences. Here ἂν belongs with the particle, conjunction, or relative, and is always followed by the subjunctive. E. g. εἰ + ἂν = εἰάν (ἤν or ἄν), ἐπειδὴ + ἂν = ἐπειδάν, ὅτε + ἂν = ὅταν, ὅς + ἂν.

In indefinite relative and temporal sentences and general suppositions ἂν may be rendered by 'ever,' e. g. ἐπειδάν, 'whenever.'

§ 21. Tenses.

Tenses in Greek do not always distinguish the time of an action; frequently they distinguish merely its kind, i. e. as continued, completed, or as a simple occurrence.

The student must distinguish the use of the tenses in the indicative (and its representatives in Oratio Obliqua, i. e. infinitive, optative, and participle) from their use in the other moods.

§ 22. Tenses in the Indicative.

The tenses in the indicative express the time as well as the kind of action. The following table will show this: —

	Action brought to pass.	Continued Action.	Completed Action.
Present time,		Pres. λύω, am loosing, or loose.	Perf. λέλυκα, have loosed.
Past time,	Aor. ἔλυσα, loosed.	Impf. ἔλυον, was loosing.	Plupf. ἐλελύκειν, had loosed.
Future time,	Fut. λύσω, shall loose.	[Fut. λύσω, shall be loosing.]	Fut. Perf. λελύσομαι, shall have been loosed.

Cf. G. §§ 1249 ff. -H. § 823.

§ 23. Aorist Tense.

While the above table will serve to define the tenses, it must be impressed upon the student that this tense is of very frequent occurrence.

It both corresponds to the so-called English imperfect, e. g. 'I did,' and also is more often used for the English perfect than the perfect itself, and lastly often takes the place of the pluperfect.

As distinguished from the imperfect it means simple past occurrence, ἐποίησα, 'I did,' while the imperfect means continued or repeated past action, ἐποίουν, 'I was doing,' or 'I used to do.'

The aorist has been described as momentary, and represented by a dot (.), while the Imperfect is represented by a line (—). This is often but not always true. Thus, ἐβασίλευε, 'he was king;' ἐβασίλευσε, 'he became king' (ingressive aorist); but ἐβασίλευσε may also refer to the whole reign looked upon as a past event, and may be translated 'he reigned.' H. § 841 ff.

The distinction, however, between the two tenses is one easily made, and only needs observation on the part of the student.

§ 24. Ingressive Aorist. (G. § 1260. H. § 842.)

The aorist often means entering upon a certain state. It will naturally be found in verbs denoting a state or condition; it is frequent in the contract verbs and in those in -εω.

ἐπλούτουν, 'I was rich;' ἐπλούτησα, 'I became rich.'

ἐνόσουν, 'I was ill;' ἐνόσησα, 'I fell ill.'

ἦρχον, 'I was in office;' ἦρξα, 'I obtained office.'

§ 25. The Aorist as distinguished from the Perfect.

Not only is the aorist used with great frequency for the English imperfect, but the Greeks often preferred to express the aorist idea where we have the perfect. So much is this the case that it will be safe for the student to make a practice of using the aorist for the perfect unless it is clear that emphasis is laid upon the state or condition in the present.

It must also be noticed that the aorist will often be required because the perfect in some verbs has a present meaning, e. g. πολλάκις ἐθαύμασα, 'I have frequently wondered.'

With this compare also § 26, Caution.

§ 26. The Pluperfect.

Where we are careful to state the event as occurring previous to some other event, the Greeks were generally satisfied with the simple statement of past occurrence.

'He sends for Cyrus from the province of which he had made him satrap,' Κῦρον μεταπέμπεται ἀπὸ τῆς ἀρχῆς ἧς αὐτὸν σατράπην ἐποίησε (aorist) ; Anab. I. i. 2.

'They went to rest, for night had come on,' ἀνεπαύοντο δέ, νύξ γὰρ ἐπεγένετο.

Often, of course, either the aorist indicative or aorist participle may be used to represent the English pluperfect.

ἐπεὶ ταῦτ' ἔλεξεν, ἀνέστη, or λέξας ταῦτα, ἀνέστη, for, 'when he had said this, he arose.'

Let the beginner, therefore, avoid the pluperfect altogether. In some of the following exercises a note will tell the student when the pluperfect is required, otherwise the aorist is to be used. Of course the pluperfect in English is often due to indirect discourse. In Greek, unless the verb is changed to the optative, the original tense and mood are both retained.

'He said that he had both seen and (had) heard these things,' ελεξεν ὅτι ταῦτα καὶ εἶδε (or ἶδοι) καὶ ἤκουσε (or ἀκούσειε). See § 53 and § 54, 2.

Caution. Some verbs are used in the perfect with a present meaning or have no present tense at all. In such verbs the pluperfect has the force of an imperfect, e. g. οἶδα (Lat. novi), 'I know;' μέμνημαι (Lat. memini), 'I remember;' ἔστηκα, 'I stand.' G. § 1263. H. § 849 (a, b, c).

§ 27. Present and Imperfect of Attempted Action.

The present or imperfect often denotes that an action was begun or attempted but not accomplished, e. g. δίδωμι, 'I offer;' ἐδίδουν, 'I offered;' but ἔδωκα (aor.), 'I gave.' πείθω, 'I try to persuade;' ἔπειθον, 'I tried to persuade;' ἔπεισα, 'I prevailed.' G. § 1255. H. §§ 825, 832.

§ 28. Primary and Secondary Tenses. (G. § 448. H. § 301.)

In the Indicative, the present, perfect, future, and future perfect are called Primary (or Principal) tenses, and the imperfect, aorists (first and second), and pluperfect are called Secondary (or Historical) tenses.

PRIMARY (P.).	SECONDARY (H.).
Present,	Imperfect,
Future,	Aorists,
Perfect,	Pluperfect.
Future Perfect.

On this difference of tense in the leading verb depends the choice of mood in the dependent sentences, i. e. Final sentences (see § 36), Indefinites (see § 39), and all finite dependent clauses in Oratio Obliqua (see § 53 ff.).

While in Latin there is also a sequence of tense, in Greek there is a sequence of mood only. Whenever any change is made by reason of dependence upon a secondary tense, use the optative mood.

But the Greeks often preferred to retain the original thought or expression, and in all these cases it was open to them to retain the original mood. This was sometimes done throughout a whole passage. Frequently there is a mixture of the two; cf. Anab. II. ii. 15.

In the table of Syntax (p. 58) an asterisk () is added to H., the sign of the Historical or Secondary sequence, to indicate that the primary sequence may be retained; thus H.

§ 29. When the optative and infinitive or participle (see § 56) are used by reason of indirect discourse, the tense corresponding to that of the original verb is used. As these moods have no imperfect nor pluperfect, the present and perfect respectively take their places. G. §§ 1280 ff. H. §§ 852, 853.

§ 30. Tenses in the Other Moods.

In the infinitive, subjunctive, optative, and imperative the tenses have no necessary connection with time, it is the kind of action that we must think of. E. g. as the whole of the imperative mood refers to the future, it is obvious that the aorist must refer to the future.

In such final clauses as ἵνα ἴδῃ and ἵνα ἴδῃς, 'to see,' 'in order to see,' the aorists both refer to the future. The distinctions, therefore, which the beginner must fix in his mind are those of continued action, simple occurrence, and completed action.

The tenses chiefly employed in these moods are the present and aorist. Here a difference obtains similar to the difference between the indicative imperfect and aorist. The present denotes continued or repeated action, while the aorist denotes a simple occurrence of the action, the time of both being precisely the same. (G. §§ 1271 ff. H. § 851.)

§ 31. Tenses of the Participle. (G. § 1288. H. § 856.)

The tenses of the participle denote present, past, or future time relatively to the time of the verb with which they are connected. While the usage is generally the same as the indicative, one or two cautions are necessary.

As elsewhere, so in the participle, the aorist is frequently used where other tenses are employed in English.

(a) The English present participle is constantly but inexactly used in expressions like rising he said; laughing he ran away; choosing their generals they came.

In such expressions it is generally obvious that the action precedes the time of the leading verb. But the first two might mean 'he said it while rising,' and 'he went on laughing while he was running away.' The Greek removes this ambiguity by means of the tense; in English we must add 'while' to give the force of the present.

ἀναστὰς ἔλεξε, 'rising (i. e. having arisen) he said.'

γελάσας ἀπέδραμε, 'he ran away with a laugh' (i. e. having laughed).

ἐλόμενοι δὲ στρατηγούς ἦλθον, 'choosing (having chosen) generals they came.'

(b) The English participle 'having ——' may be either the Greek aorist or perfect

The aorist expresses the act or fact; the perfect denotes the state. E. g. —

AORIST.

PERFECT.

ἐκπλαγείς, 'having been frightened.'	ἐκτεπληγμένος, 'in a state of terror.'
τρωθείς, 'having received a wound.'	τετρωμένος, 'in a wounded condition.'
πεσών, 'having fallen.'	πεπτωκώς, 'having fallen and lying on the ground.'

Generally speaking the aorist will be the most frequent translation for the English perfect participle.

Notice, however, the usage of the Greek perfect in the following sentences: — ὑποδεδεμένοι ἐκοιμῶντο, 'they went to sleep with their shoes on,' Anab. IV. v. 14. With which compare the present participle of customary action in Plato, Theaet. 193. C.

οἱ ἔμπαλιν ὑποδούμενοι, 'those who wear their shoes first on one foot, then on the other (i. e. reverse them).'

καταλαμβάνει . . . τὴν θυγατέρα τοῦ κωμάρχου ἐνάτην ἡμέραν γεγαμημένην, 'he finds the village-chief's daughter married these eight days' (or, 'now the ninth day'); Anab. IV. v. 24.

§ 32. Independent and Dependent Moods and Tenses.

In the following sections an attempt is made to give the student a concise view of the more important groups of syntax. The first acquaintance with the subjunctive and optative is apt to be perplexing. Since the same translation will not always suit these moods, the average student not unnaturally concludes either that any translation will do, or that no translation is exact enough. The result of this is indifference or discouragement. But when he sees that the main uses may be brought into reasonable limits, each with its own clear meaning, he takes hold of the subject with more energy.

To make these uses plain to the eye, a Table of Syntax is given at the end of these groups (pp. 58-61). After the student has once clearly understood the following explanations, he may turn directly to the table whenever it is necessary to refresh his memory.

The first and most obvious distinction in connected discourse is that between dependent and independent sentences. The teacher must make this very clear by examples, and require the student to point out the conjunction or relative pronoun in each finite dependent sentence.

(A.) INDEPENDENT SENTENCES.

§ 33. GROUP I. (a) Indicative. Negative οὐ. Statements and Direct Questions, past, present, or future. (G. § 1317. H. § 865.)

That is not true. Will he be there? He was there yesterday. All such sentences are put in the indicative. If the sentence is negative, use οὐ.

E. g. [εἰ τοῦτο ἀληθές ἐστι] (οὐ) χαίρω, ' [if that is true] I do (not) rejoice.' The part in brackets is of course dependent, and has nothing to do with the present point.

(b.) Potential Optative. (G. § 1327. H. § 872.)

Less positive assertions and questions are expressed by the optative with ἄν. Its translation here is may, can, might, would, etc.

‘I should like to ask,’ ἡδέως ἄν ἐροίμην, Dem. XVIII. § 64.

‘Whither can one turn?’ ποῖ τις ἄν τράποιτο; Ar. Plut. 375.

N. B. Do not use the future optative in this construction or elsewhere except in Oratio Obliqua. Present and aorist are the tenses most frequent.

This use of the optative may become the apodosis of an (ideal or) “should” condition; see § 44 (δ).

§ 34. GROUP II. Deliberative Questions. (G. § 1358. H. § 866 (3).) Negative μή.

Questions not asked directly and for information, but with hesitation and doubt about the course to be pursued, are put in the subjunctive first person, and rarely the third. Negative μή.

ποῖ τράπωμαι; ‘whither shall I turn?’

εἶπω ἢ μή; ‘shall I speak or not?’

N. B. This may change to indicative future, e. g.

εἴπωμεν ἢ σιγῶμεν; ἢ τί δράσομεν; ‘shall we speak or be silent, or what shall we do?’ Eur. Id. 758.

§ 35. GROUP III. Commands, Exhortations, Prohibitions, Wishes. (G. §§ 1342 ff. H. §§ 866 (2), 873, 874.) Negative μή.

Positive commands are expressed by the imperative mood both in the second and third persons. λέγε, 'speak; ' λεγέτω, 'let him speak.'

Exhortations, both positive and negative, are expressed by the first person of the subjunctive. ἴωμεν, 'let us go; ' μὴ ἴωμεν, 'let us not go.'

Prohibitions of second and third persons are expressed by the present imperative or aorist subjunctive. μὴ ποίει τοῦτο or μὴ ποιήσης τοῦτο, 'do not do that.' So μὴ λέγε or μὴ εἶπης, 'don't say that.' The aorist imperative may also be used in the third person. G. M. & T. § 260.

Wishes. Future. Past or Present. Negative μή.
(G. §§ 1507 ff. H. § 870.)

A wish in the future is expressed by the optative. From this use came the name (Latin optare, 'to wish'). εἴθε or εἰ γάρ may be prefixed to the optative.

τεθναίην, 'may I die.' μὴ γένοιτο, 'may it not happen.' In the New Testament this is freely translated by 'God forbid.'

A wish in the present or past, which by its very nature is not or was not attained, is expressed by the secondary tenses of the indicative with εἴθε or εἰ γάρ.

εἴθε τοῦτο ἐποίει, 'would that (O that) he were doing (pres.) or had done (past) this.'

εἴθε τοῦτο ἐποίησε, 'would that he had done (past) this.'

'But he does not,' 'did not do it' is implied by these respectively.

(B.) DEPENDENT SENTENCES. GROUPS IV.-XI.

Remember here the distinction between primary and secondary tenses in the independent sentence.

§ 36. GROUP IV. Final Sentences. (G. §§ 1365 ff. H. § 880 ff.)

Purpose or intention is expressed by the particles ἵνα, ὅπως (or ὥς), 'in order that,' with the subjunctive. After secondary tenses this subjunctive may become optative or remain unchanged. Theoretically the optative should always follow secondary tenses, but the Greeks often preferred to retain the more vivid subjunctive. Cf. G. M. & T. pp. 398 ff.

This retention of the subjunctive for the optative is common in other constructions also. It is indicated in the table by an asterisk added to the H*, which stands for Historic or Secondary.

ἐρχεται ἵνα ἴδῃ, 'he comes that he may see,' or 'to see.'

ἦλθεν ἵνα ἴδῃ, 'he came that he might see,' or 'to see.'

This latter might remain * ἦλθεν ἵνα ἴδῃ, 'he came to see.'

The negative is μή. 'He went away that he might not see,' or 'to avoid seeing,' ἀπῆλθεν ἵνα μὴ ἴδῃ* or ἴδῃ.

CAUTION: The Greek differs from the Latin here. No verb is changed to the subjunctive in a dependent sentence. Generally speaking, except in Oratio Obliqua infinitives, either the original indicative or subjunctive is retained or else the mood is changed to optative.

Purpose is frequently expressed by ὥς and future participle. See § 15. Purpose is also expressed by ὅστις (ὅς) and the future indicative.

‘Send some to tell,’ πέμψον τινας οἵτινες . . . ἀπαγγελοῦσιν, Xen. Cyr. 5. 2. 3.

§ 37. After words of precaution or provision use ὅπως and the future indicative. ὁρῶ, σκοπῶ, ‘I see,’ ‘look out for,’ are often used in this connection. The negative is μή.

‘See to it how you shall replenish the ranks,’ σκοπεῖτε ὅπως . . . ἀντιπληρώσετε τὰς τάξεις, Xen. Cyr. 2. 2. 26.

The optative is rarely substituted in secondary clauses.

§ 38. After words of Fearing. Here the conjunctive particle is μή ‘lest;’ therefore if a negative is required, add οὐ. If the fear has reference to the future, the subjunctive follows primary tenses. The optative may follow secondary.

‘He fears lest it may (not) happen,’ φοβέται μή (οὐ) γένηται.

‘He feared lest it might (not) happen,’ ἐφοβείτο μή (οὐ) γένοιτο (or γένηται*).

Present or Past Fear. If what one fears is present or past, then μή is followed by the indicative present or past tenses.

'I fear lest it is now happening,' φοβοῦμαι μή γίνεται.

'I am afraid it happened,' φοβοῦμαι μή ἐγένετο.

§ 39. GROUP V. Definite and Indefinite Sentences.

Definite sentences explain themselves. See Groups VI., VII., VIII., X., etc. Indefinite sentences are grouped separately only for the sake of emphasis and clearness. The distinction between a definite and an indefinite sentence should be clearly grasped by the student, to carry with him in studying the conditional, relative, and temporal sentences.

Indefiniteness may most conveniently be expressed in English by the word 'ever,' 'at any time.' In conditional sentences, for example, a definite supposition refers to a definite act; as 'if he (now) has this he will give it;' an indefinite refers to any one of a set of actions, as 'if ever (or whenever) he has anything, he gives it.'

Definite :—

Conditional. 'If death is now drawing near, it is well,' εἰ ἐγγὺς ἔρχεται θάνατος, καλῶς ἔχει.

Relative. 'This death, which is approaching, is welcome,' οὗτος ὁ θάνατος, ὃς ἐγγὺς ἔρχεται, ἡδιστός ἐστι.

Temporal. '[Even now] when death is approaching, he rejoices,' χαίρει [καὶ νῦν] ὅτε θάνατος ἐγγὺς ἔρχεται.

Indefinite:—

Conditional. 'If death (ever) comes near, no one is (ever) willing to die,' ἤν (ἐάν) ἐγγὺς ἔλθῃ θάνατος, οὐδεὶς βούλεται ἀποθνήσκειν.

Relative. 'Whatsoever form of death approaches, is always welcome,' ὅστις ἂν ἔλθῃ θάνατος, ἡδιστός ἐστι.

Temporal. 'Whenever death draws near, he rejoices,' ὅταν ἐγγὺς ἔλθῃ θάνατος, χαίρει.

If in these indefinite sentences a secondary tense be substituted for the primary tense in the leading clause, then, according to rule, the ἂν disappears and the optative is substituted for the subjunctive. We should then have in the examples above —

(1.) ἤν ἔλθῃ = εἰ ἔλθοι after ἐβούλετο.

(2.) ὅστις ἂν ἔλθῃ = ὅστις ἔλθοι after ἦν.

(3.) ὅταν ἔλθῃ = ὅτε ἔλθοι after εἵχαυρε.

Meaning (1.) 'if ever it came, he wished ;' (2.) 'whoever came, he was,' etc. ; (3.) 'whenever he came, he rejoiced.'

§ 40. GROUP VI. Conditional Sentences. (G. §§ 1381 ff.
H. §§ 889—907.)

The 'if' clause is called the protasis; the statement or conclusion is called the apodosis. The order in which they come is not essential, but the protasis is of course always dependent on the apodosis.

The word for 'if' is εἰ. When it is followed by the subjunctive it is combined with ἂν and becomes ἐάν or ἤν (sometimes ἄν).

When negatives are needed οὐ is always used in the apodosis because it is a statement,¹ and μή in the protasis because it expresses a contingency.

§ 41. Conditional sentences may refer either to the present, the past, or the future. They may also be particular or general, that is, definite or indefinite, as we have seen in § 39. This distinction is essential only in present and past conditions; e. g. ἐάν τις κλέπτη, κολάσω αὐτόν, might be either general or particular; but for all practical purposes it is treated as particular.

We distinguish therefore in construction four classes of particular conditions, and for convenience subdivide general conditions into present or past general suppositions, according as the apodosis contains primary or secondary tenses. This makes six forms in all (cf. note 1, p. 46).

No account is here taken of mixed conditions, etc. See G. § 1421. H. §§ 901 ff.

§ 42. Particular Suppositions. — A. Present and Past.

(1) Simple Suppositions. The 'if' clause (protasis) simply makes a present or past (particular) supposition, as, 'if that is so, run;' or, 'if it rained in the night, the grass must be wet;' or, 'if this is the place, I don't like it.'

Rule: Protasis has εἰ with indicative; apodosis indicative (or any other form of the verb).

‘If he is doing this, it is well,’ εἰ πράσσει τοῦτο, καλῶς ἔχει.

‘If he did that, it was well,’ εἰ ἔπραξε τοῦτο, καλῶς εἶχεν.

‘If that is so, fly!’ εἰ τοῦτο οὕτως ἔχει, φεύγε!

‘Well, if it pleases you, let us sail,’ ἀλλ’ εἰ δοκεῖ σοι, πλέωμεν.

§ 43. (2) Unreal Conditions, or Suppositions Contrary to Fact. If we wish to imply that the condition is not or was not fulfilled, then we indicate this by adding the particle ἄν to the past tenses of the indicative in the apodosis.

Thus, ‘if he had done this, he would have been punished,’ implies that he did not do it. So also, ‘if he were here they would start,’ implies that he is not here.

Notice that unreality in the present is expressed by the imperfect indicative.

‘If he were here, they would be glad,’ εἰ ἐκεῖνος παρῆν, ἔχαιρον ἄν.

Unreality in the past is expressed by the imperfect or aorist (rarely pluperfect) indicative.

‘If he had done this, he would have been punished,’ εἰ τοῦτο ἐποίησεν, ἐκολάσθη ἄν.

§ 44. B. Future Conditions.

Future conditions are usually of two kinds. (a) One when the future case is anticipated,¹ or stated vividly or with probability of fulfilment. It corresponds to the (old English) 'shall' or the much neglected English subjunctive, as 'if he shall go,' or 'if he go, I shall rejoice;' 'if he shall read,' or 'if he read, I shall listen;' for which we have unfortunately substituted 'if he goes' and 'if he reads' in every-day language.²

(b) The future case may be stated in a less vivid form, corresponding to English 'should,' as 'If he should go,' or 'If he were to go, you would rejoice.' This is also called the ideal condition.³

For convenience, therefore, we may divide the future conditions into "Shall" and "Should" conditions.

§ 45. (3) 'Shall' Conditions.

(a) Rule: The apodosis has the future indicative or any other future form, like the imperative, etc.; the protasis has ἐάν (ἤν, ἄν) and the subjunctive.

¹ "Anticipatory" is the term used by Professor Gildersleeve in Trans. Am. Ph. Ass., 1876.

² Goodwin, Trans. Am. Ph. Ass., 1876, p. 88.

³ "The Ideal condition is the condition of the fancy. There is often an element of wish for or against, of hope or fear. It is the great condition of illustration, and is often used in comparisons, where those untrained in Greek modes of conception would expect the Unreal condition." Gildersleeve, Trans. Am. Ph. Ass., 1876, p. 4.

‘If he do (shall do) this, it will be well,’ ἐὰν πράσῃ τοῦτο, καλῶς ἔξει.

The distinction between present and aorist subjunctive in the protasis may be illustrated by the two Latin equivalents.

ἐὰν τοῦτο πράσῃ, si hoc faciet.

ἐὰν τοῦτο πράξῃ, si hoc fecerit.

This is the most common form of the conditional.

(b) There is another and less usual form of the ‘shall’ conditions, i. e. εἰ and future indicative in protasis. This form presents a “threatening or unfavorable view,” and is sometimes introduced to contrast with the ἐάν and subjunctive condition (see Gildersleeve, l. c.).

εἰ μὴ καθέξεις γλῶσσαν, ἔσται σοι κακά (G. § 1405), ‘if you do not (shall not) restrain your tongue, you will have trouble.’

So Soph. Ajax, 1155, εἰ γὰρ ποιήσεις, ἴσθι πημανούμενος, ‘for if you shall do this, know that you will meet your ruin.’

§ 46. (4) ‘Should’ Conditions.

Rule: The apodosis has optative and ἄν, the protasis has εἰ and the optative.

‘If he should do this (or, ‘if he were to do this’), it would be well,’ εἰ πράσσοι (πράξειε) τοῦτο, καλῶς ἂν ἔχοι.

§ 47. General Suppositions.

In general suppositions the apodosis expresses a customary or repeated action, and the protasis refers to any one of a series or class of acts.

(5) Present General Suppositions. Rule: Protasis ἐάν and subjunctive; apodosis present indicative (or some other primary form).

‘If (ever) any one steals, he is (always) punished,’ ἐάν τις κλέπτῃ, κολάζεται.

(6) Past General Suppositions. Rule: Protasis εἰ and optative; apodosis secondary indicative.¹

‘If any one (ever) stole, he was punished,’ εἰ τις κλέπτοι, ἐκολάζετο.

§ 48. GROUP VII. Causal Sentences. (G. § 1505. H. § 925.) ‘As;’ ‘since;’ ‘because.’

These are often done into Greek by the participle; see § 15. They are also expressed by conjunctions with the indicative. The negative is οὐ. The most common conjunctions are ‘as,’ ‘since,’ — ἐπειδὴ, ἐπεὶ, ὥς; ² ‘because,’ — ὅτι, διότι.

² These are also temporal in Group X.

‘Since I am unable to perceive . . . I have thought best,’ ἐπεὶ δὲ . . . οὐ δύναμαι . . . αἰσθῆσθαι . . . ἔδοξέ μοι, Anab.
 II. v. 4.

‘I wrote this (on this account) because it was deficient,’ ἔγραψα δὲ αὐτὰ . . . διὰ τὸδε, ὅτι . . . ἐκλιπὲς τοῦτο ἦν, Thuc.
 I. 97.

§ 49. GROUP VIII. Relative Sentences. (G. §§ 1425–
 1447. H. § 909.)

The antecedent of a relative may be either definite or indefinite; e. g. —

(Definite) (ταῦτα) ἃ ἔχω ὁρᾶς, ‘you see what I have.’

(Indefinite) ἃ ἂν βούλωνται ἔξουσιν, ‘they will have whatever they may want.’

A relative as such does not affect the mood of the following verb. Therefore a relative with a definite antecedent may be followed by the indicative (negative οὐ) or any other construction of an independent sentence.

§ 50. Relative as Conditional, etc. (G. §§ 1428 ff.
 H. § 912 ff.)

(a) The relative with an indefinite antecedent may be used as the protasis of any of the six conditions (see Group VI.). The negative is of course μή.

This is very common, and may be illustrated as follows. If in the clause ἐὰν κλέπτῃ τοῦτο, instead of εἰ (i. e. εἰάν = εἰ + ἄν) we put ὅς or ὅστις or ὅτε, etc., we change the expression from an 'if' clause to a 'who' clause or a 'when' clause, etc., without any further alteration.

ὅστις ἂν τοῦτο κλέπτῃ, 'whosoever shall steal this;' or, ὅταν τοῦτο κλέπτῃ, 'whenever he shall steal this,' etc.

When the subjunctive is used ἄν remains attached to particle or conjunction or with the pronoun; with the optative ἄν is dropped according to rule.

(b) Relative adverbs like ὅπου, 'where;' ὅποι 'whither;' ὁπόθεν, 'whence,' follow the rule, — ἄν with subjunctive after primary; optative after secondary. Cf. Temporal Sentences, § 51.

(c) The relative with the future indicative may be used to express purpose. This has been explained under Group IV. The negative is μή. G. § 236. H. § 911.

§ 51. GROUP IX. Temporal Sentences. 'When,' 'While,' 'Since,' 'Before,' 'After,' 'Until.' (G. §§ 1463-1474. H. §§ 913, 920.)

These are closely connected with relative sentences.

ὅτε, 'when' (pure time, usually with present, imperfect, or aorist).

ὥς, 'when.'

ἐπεὶ and ἐπειδὴ, 'after,' 'after that,' 'since,' 'when.'

ἕως, 'until,' 'while.'

πρίν, 'before,' 'before that.' οὐ . . . πρίν = (not . . . before) ἕως, 'until.'

(a) In definite sentences the temporal conjunctions ὅτε, ὥς, ἐπεί, ἐπειδή, ἕως (and οὐ . . . πρίν), ‘until,’ take the indicative mode; negative οὐ.

(b) In indefinite sentences they may add the particle ἄν, and take the subjunctive after primary tenses. After secondary tenses change the subjunctive to optative, omitting ἄν. Negative μή.

(c) πρίν, meaning ‘before,’ takes the infinitive (regularly the aorist). To avoid ambiguity the following rule may be quoted: —

“When πρίν must be translated ‘before,’ it must have the infinitive; when it may be translated ‘until,’ it may take the finite constructions of ἕως, ‘until.’”¹

Examples: —

(a) ὥς δὲ τοῦτο ἐπύθετο, ἀπῆλθε, ‘when he learned this, he went away.’

ἐπειδὴ δ’ ἕως ἐγένετο, διέβαινον τὴν γέφυραν, ‘when it was morning they crossed the bridge,’ Anab. II. iv. 24.

ἐπειδὴ δὲ συνήλθον, λέγει ὁ Κλέαρχος τάδε, ‘after that they had assembled, Clearchus spoke as follows.’

(b) ὅποταν οὖν τοὺς πρώτους κωλύωσι Ξενοφῶν λύει τὴν ἀπόφραξιν, κ. τ. λ., ‘whenever they hinder the van, Xenophon removes the obstruction;’ or ὅποτε οὖν τοὺς πρώτους κωλύοιεν Ξενοφῶν ἔλνε, κ. τ. λ., ‘whenever they hindered the van, Xenophon removed, etc.,’ Anab. IV. ii. 25.

(c) διέβησαν πρὶν τοὺς ἄλλους ἀποκρίνασθαι, ‘They crossed over before the others answered,’ Anab. I. iv. 16.

§ 52. GROUP X. Consecutive or Result Clauses. 'So that,' 'so as.' (G. § 1449. H. § 927.)

ὥστε, 'so that,' 'so as,' is often preceded by οὕτως, 'thus' (or some other word like τοιοῦτος, τοσοῦτος, etc.). Compare Latin ita . . . ut.

It may be followed by the infinitive (negative μή) to express the natural result; or by the indicative (negative οὐ) to emphasize the actual result.

πάντας οὕτω διατιθεῖς ἀπεπέμπετο ὥστε αὐτῷ μᾶλλον φίλους εἶναι ἢ βασιλεῖ, 'he sent them all back again in such a frame of mind as to be more friendly to him than to the king,' Anab. I. i. 5.

Indicative: ἐπιπίπτει χιὼν ἄπλετος, ὥστε ἀπέκρυνε καὶ τὰ ὅπλα καὶ τοὺς ἀνθρώπους, 'there was such a tremendous fall of snow that it covered up both the armor and the men,' Anab. IV. iv. 11.

The distinction between the two is often slight and may be neglected.

'Are you so senseless that you expect?' οὕτως ἀγνωμόνως ἔχετε, ὥστε ἐλπίζετε;

Here ὥστε ἐλπίζειν would mean 'so senseless as to expect.' G. § 237, Remark.

The student will more frequently employ the infinitive construction.

The construction of ὥστε, 'consequently,' 'therefore,' is not here included.

ὥστε μὴ and infinitive may be rendered by 'from . . . -ing.'

ὥστε δὲ μὴ ὀλισθάνειν ἢ ὑλῆ . . . σχήσει, 'the wood will keep (you) from slipping,' Anab. III. v. 11. Just before this was done by the articular infinitive: ξέει τοῦ μὴ καταδύναι, cf. § 14, Caution.

§ 53. GROUP XI. Oratio Obliqua. Indirect Discourse.
(G. §§ 1475 ff. H. §§ 928-937, 946.)

If I say 'I am he whom you seek,' it is a direct statement including a relative sentence. If some one hearing the remark should repeat it to a third person, he would be apt to do so in the following words: 'He said that he was (the one) whom they were seeking.'

Here the whole of the original sentence has been made dependent upon the new assertion 'he said.' In doing this several changes took place. 'That' was prefixed as a sign of quotation; 'I' and 'you' were respectively changed to the third person; and the present tenses 'am' and 'seek' were changed to the past.

In Latin these sentences would be, direct, (ego) is sum quem conquiritis; indirect, dixit se esse eum quem conquirerent, which, translated literally, but inelegantly, into English, would be, 'he said himself to be (the one) whom they were seeking.'

Now in Greek equivalents of both these constructions occur, some verbs requiring one, some the other; while others permit either. It must be added, however, that the Greeks often preferred to retain the direct form, just as elsewhere the primary sequence may be retained even after secondary tenses.

The student fresh from Latin must be cautioned about the mood to be employed. If the mood of the finite verb is changed at all it becomes optative. Of course the accusative and infinitive construction must be remembered, but no subjunctive arises in Greek from Oratio Obliqua.

§ 54. The Greek construction therefore is: —

Verbs of saying and believing, etc., like λέγω, φημί, εἶπον, 'say;' νομίζω, οἶμαι, 'believe,' and similar verbs and expressions, take —

1. In the leading clauses ὅτι, 'that,' or ὡς, 'how that,' and a finite verb (opt. H.*) (always after εἶπον),

Or accusative and infinitive (always use accusative and infinitive after φημί, οἶμαι, νομίζω, and ἡγοῦμαι).

λέγω, etc. (see below), allow either construction.

2. In the subordinate clauses the verbs, if changed, become optative (H.*).

εἶπον — ὅτι and finite verb.

 — (acc. and) infinitive.

φημί — (acc. and) infinitive.

§ 55. ἄν in Oratio Obliqua. It is important to notice the use of ἄν in indirect discourse. Its presence or absence often indicates the form of the original sentence. In indirect discourse (statements with $\delta\tau\iota$ and $\acute{\omega}\varsigma$, or questions) an indicative or optative with $\acute{\alpha}\nu$ is retained without any change. This shows, for example, whether an apodosis belonged to an unreal or a 'should' (ideal) condition. But these moods may also be changed to infinitive with $\acute{\alpha}\nu$, as e. g. in § 56 (a).

(1) In secondary sequence (i. e. with the optative) $\acute{\alpha}\nu$ will never be found in a subordinate sentence. E. g. in $\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\alpha}\nu$ and subjunctive, $\delta\tau\alpha\nu$ and subjunctive, etc., both remain, or else the $\acute{\alpha}\nu$ is dropped and the subjunctive changed to optative, making $\epsilon\iota$ and the optative as if it were the protasis of a 'should' condition. The apodosis must here be depended upon to show the original form of the condition.

(2) $\acute{\alpha}\nu$ with the infinitive must represent either $\acute{\alpha}\nu$ with the optative or $\acute{\alpha}\nu$ with a secondary tense of the indicative.

When $\acute{\alpha}\nu$ seems to stand with the leading verb (as it does regularly with $\omicron\iota\mu\alpha\iota$), it must be transferred in thought to the dependent infinitive, no matter how far distant, and even if another $\acute{\alpha}\nu$ is found repeated there.

§ 56. Some of the more common verbs are here mentioned with their construction.

It must be understood that the less usual or exceptional usage is purposely ignored.

(a) Verbs of thinking, believing, and saying take accusative and infinitive. Always use infinitive after ἡγοῦμαι, οἶμαι (οἶμαι), νομίζω, 'believe;' ἐλπίζω and δοκῶ, 'think,' 'expect;' δοκῶ and φαίνομαι (videor), 'seem;' φημί, 'say.' λέγω, 'say,' takes either construction.

(b) Verbs of saying, perceiving,¹ and knowing take ὅτι (ὥς) and finite verb. E. g. εἶπον (always) and λέγω, 'say;' ἀγγέλλω, 'announce;' ὁρῶ, 'see,' and ἀκούω, 'hear' (more often with participle); αἰσθάνομαι, 'perceive;' πυνθάνομαι, 'learn by inquiry;' μανθάνω, γιγνώσκω, οἶδα, 'learn,' 'know.'

(c) Verbs of perceiving (both actual and *intellectual*¹ perception) take also the accusative (genitive) and participle.

(d) In addition to these two uses, some of these verbs are also used with the infinitive with a difference of meaning.

ἀκούω and πυνθάνομαι with participle, direct; with infinitive, indirect.

ἐπειδὴ δέ σου ἀκούω ταῦτα λέγοντος, 'but when I hear thee saying this,' Protag. 320 B.

ἀκούω δὲ καὶ ἄλλα ἔθνη πολλὰ τοιαῦτα εἶναι, 'I hear that there are also many other such nations,' Anab. II. v. 13. But also ἤκουσε Κῦρον ἐν Κιλικίᾳ ὄντα, Anab. I. iv. 5.

¹ "Verbs of perception (knowing and showing) take ὅτι or ὥς with the finite verb of intellectual perception, the participle of actual or intellectual perception." Gildersleeve, Just. Martyr, p. 107.

αἰσθάνομαι with participle, 'perceive;' with infinitive, 'believe,' 'have the opinion.'

αἰσθάνομαί σε μέγα παρὰ βασιλεῖ δυνάμενον (Kühner), 'I perceive that you are very powerful with the king.' But — αἰσθανόμενος αὐτοὺς μέγα παρὰ βασιλεῖ Δαρείῳ δύνασθαι, 'believing that they were very powerful with King Darius,' Thuc. vi. 59.

γινώσκω with participle (ὅτι or ὥς the more common construction), 'know' or 'perceive that;' with infinitive, 'judge,' 'decide,' or 'know how to.'

γνόντες δὲ οἱ Ἐπιδάμνιοι οὐδεμίαν . . . τιμωρίαν οὔσαν, 'when the Epidamnians perceived that there was no help,' Thuc. I. 25. But — ἐγνώσαν κερδαλέωτερον εἶναι, 'they decided that it was more advantageous,' Anab. I. ix. 17.

οἶδα and ἐπίσταμαι with participle (or more frequently with ὅτι or ὥς), 'know that;' with infinitive, 'know how to.' For the participle in nominative, cf. below.

οἶδα αὐτὸν ἐλθόντα, 'I know that he came' (cf. Thuc. I. 69). For ἐπίσταμαι and οἶδα with ὅτι cf. Anab. III. ii. 20-25.

But cf. Soph. Ajax, 666, —

εἰσόμεσθα μὲν θεοῖς εἵκειν, μαθησόμεσθα δ' Ἀτρεΐδας σέβειν,

'We shall know how to yield to the gods and shall take lessons in reverencing the Atridae.'

§ 57. (a) Nominative of the Participle. Not only may these verbs take an accusative (genitive) and participle after them, but also, when the subject is the same, the participle may be put in the nominative with the appropriate meaning; e. g. οἶδα ὄν, 'I know that I am.' ἔγνων ἡττημένος, 'I knew that I was beaten,' Ar. Eq. 658.

(b) φαίνομαι has a difference in meaning when used with participle (nominative) and with infinitive; e. g. φαίνεται ὄν, 'he manifestly is;' φαίνεται εἶναι, 'he seems to be.' So Xen. Conv. I. 15, ἀπεμύττετό τε καὶ τῇ φωνῇ σαφῶς κλαίειν ἐφαίνετο, 'he both blew his nose, and by the sound of his voice he seemed really to be weeping.' ἐφαίνετο κλαίων would have meant, 'it was clear that he was weeping' (Kühner, Ausf. Gram. I. p. 631).

§ 58. Questions in Indirect Discourse. These follow the natural rule, i. e.: After primary tenses, verb unchanged (i. e. indicative or subjunctive); after secondary, use optative (H.*). Negative is οὐ.

§ 59. Wishes, Commands, etc., are put in the infinitive. The negative is μή.

An important difference from Latin is the use of the infinitive after words of will and desire, which may for convenience be included here. βούλομαι, ἐθέλω, 'I wish;' ἀξιῶ, 'I desire;' δέομαι, 'I beg;'

κελεύω (εἶπον), 'order,' and other similar verbs take the infinitive; negative μή.

Notice this use of εἶπον as distinguished from the usual meaning, 'said.' Cf. Anab. IV. v. 4: (ὁ μάντις) εἶπε σφαγιάσασθαι τῷ ἀνέμῳ, 'the priest ordered that a sacrifice be made to the wind.'

RULES FOR CASES.

Rules for the cases are here added in a somewhat condensed form for the benefit of younger students. For fuller treatment see the Grammars. G. §§ 1042-1198. H. §§ 706-783.

§ 61. Nominative.

The subject of a finite verb is in the nominative case. E. g. ὁ ἀνὴρ τρέχει.

§ 62. Predicate.

A predicate noun or adjective is in the same case as the subject.

ὁ Κῦρος ἐστὶ βασιλεύς, 'Cyrus is king.'

ὁ Κῦρος ἐγένετο ἄν βασιλεύς, 'Cyrus would have become king.'

So with a passive verb, Κῦρος ἀπεδείχθη στρατηγός, 'Cyrus was appointed general.'

§ 63. Accusative Case. Direct Object (Inner and Outer). Motion to or toward.

I. The direct object of an active transitive verb is in the accusative case; e. g. φέρει τὴν ὄρνιν, 'he brings the chicken.'

II. Cognate Accusative. An accusative may repeat an idea already contained in a verb (intransitive or transitive) or even in an adjective or noun.

(Intransitive verb) ἔδραμε δρόμον, 'he ran a race.'

(Transitive verb) Ξενοφῶν δὲ ὄναρ εἶδεν, 'Xenophon saw a vision.'

(Adjective) κακὸς πᾶσαν κακίαν, 'bad with all badness.'

Often the cognate idea is only implied.

τὰ ἔσχατα κινδυνεύει, 'he takes the greatest risk,' = τὸν ἔσχατον κίνδυνον κινδυνεύει.

III. Accusative of Extent. The accusative may denote extent of time or space.

(Time) ἔμειναν ἡμέρας τρεῖς, 'they remained three days.'

(Space) ἐξήλανε παρασάγγας πέντε, 'he marched five leagues.'

IV. Accusative of Specification. (1) The accusative may be used with verbs (even intransitive or passive), adjectives, or nouns to denote the part affected, or that in respect to which a statement is made.

(Passive) τὸν ὀφθαλμὸν ἐκκεκομμένος, 'blind in one eye,' Dem. 247, 11.

(Intransitive) Ἕλληνές εἰσι τὸ γένος, 'they are Greeks by race.'

(Adjective) πόδας ὥκους Ἀχιλλεύς, 'swift-footed Achilles.'

(2) An accusative is often used adverbially; e. g. τέλος, 'finally;' οὐδέν, 'not at all;' τί, 'in some respect;' τί; 'why?'

V., VI., VII. Double Accusative. Two accusatives may be used with one verb.

V. Double Object. Two accusatives, usually one of the person and the other of the thing, may follow verbs of asking,	teaching,

clothing,	concealing,
depriving,	reminding, etc.

παῖς μέγας μικρὸν παῖδα ἐξέδυνσε τὸν χιτῶνα, 'a large boy stripped a small boy of his tunic,' Xen. Cyr. 1, 3, 17.

When the verb becomes passive the thing remains accusative.

VI. Object and Predicate. An accusative may be predicated of the object after verbs of naming, making, choosing, considering, etc.

Δαρεῖος Κῦρον σατράπην ἐποίησε, 'Darius made Cyrus viceroy.'

When the verb becomes passive, both accusatives become nominative. See § 62.

VII. Object and Cognate. Verbs of doing anything to or saying anything of a person or thing may take two accusatives, one the direct object and the other cognate.

ταυτί με ποιοῦσι; 'are they doing these things to me?' Ar. Vesp. 696.

Often the 'thing' is expressed by an adverb, e. g. κακῶς λέγει αὐτόν, 'he speaks ill of him,' i. e. κακῶς = κακά.

VIII. (1) The accusative always follows the prepositions (ἀνά), εἰς (= ἐς), and (with persons) ὥς.

ἀφίκετο ὥς Περδίκκαν καὶ εἰς τὴν Χαλκιδικὴν, 'he came to Perdiccas and to the Chalcidic land,' Thuc. 4, 79 (ἐς in text).

NOTE. (a) In epic and lyric poets ἀνά is also used with the dative, meaning 'upon.' With the accusative the student will find it (frequent in Xenophon and Herodotus) as the opposite or correlative of κατά with accusative, meaning, 'up along,' 'through,' 'by,' 'to the extent of.'

ἀνὰ τὸν ποταμόν, 'up the river;' ἀνὰ πᾶσαν τὴν ἡμέραν, 'all through the day;' but ἀνὰ πᾶσαν ἡμέραν, 'day by day;' ἀνὰ πέντε παρασάγγας, 'at the rate of five leagues,' i.e. 'by fives;' ἀνὰ κράτος, 'at the top of one's speed,' Anab. I. x. 15.

(b) ἐς is common for εἰς in Ionic, poets, and Thucydides.

The accusative is also one of the cases employed after (ἀμφί), διά, κατά, μετά, ὑπέρ, ἐπί, παρά, περί, πρός, ὑπό.

NOTE. (c) The student will find ἀμφί and accusative chiefly in Xenophon and poets. Also, however, in the phrase οἱ ἀμφί τινα, e. g. Plato, Hipp. Maj. 281, C., οἱ ἀμφὶ Θαλῆν, 'Thales and the other philosophers of his school.'

(2) Many intransitive verbs become transitive when compounded with a preposition, and take the accusative.

διαβαίνουσι τὸν ποταμόν, 'they are crossing the river.'

Note also that when a transitive verb is compounded with a preposition, both parts may take an accusative.

ὑπερήνεγκαν τὸν . . . ἰσθμὸν τὰς ναῦς, 'they carried the boats over the isthmus,' Thuc. 3, 81.

IX. An accusative follows the adverbs of swearing νή and μά, 'by:' e. g. νή τὸν Δία, 'yes, by Zeus;' μὰ τὸν Δία, 'no, by Zeus.'

X. Accusative and Infinitive. The subject of the infinitive is in the accusative case.

τὸν Κῦρον εἶναι βασιλέα, (he says that) 'Cyrus is king.'
τὸ ἡμᾶς εἶναι θνητούς, 'the fact that we are mortal.'

§ 64. Genitive Case. Meanings: 'of;' 'from;' 'out of;' etc.

The genitive has two main usages.

1. As a real genitive (of), serving to define more closely a noun (or verb, adjective, etc.).

2. As the ablative genitive (from); the genitive has absorbed the 'whence' meaning of the lost ablative.

I. Adnominal Genitive.

A noun (not in apposition) limiting the meaning of another noun is put in the genitive. This includes

1. The possessive genitive.

ὁ Ἐπυάξης ἀνὴρ, 'Epyaxa's husband.'

2. The subjective genitive.

ὁ τῶν βαρβάρων φόβος τῶν Ἑλλήνων, 'the barbarians' fear of the Greeks;' i. e. the fear felt by the barbarians.

3. The objective genitive.

ὁ τῶν βαρβάρων φόβος τῶν Ἑλλήνων, 'the barbarians' fear of the Greeks ;' i. e. felt towards the Greeks.

This genitive often has the translation of 'for' in English; e. g. πόθος τῆς πόλεως, 'a longing for their city.'

4. The partitive genitive. This genitive denotes the whole after words denoting a part.

τῶν πολεμίων τὸ πολὺ, 'the greater part of the enemy.'

So ἦν δὲ τούτων τῶν σταθμῶν, 'now there were some of these day's journeys,' Anab. I. v. 7.

5. The genitive of material.

δύο χοίνικας ἀλφίτων, 'two quarts of meal.'

6. The genitive of measure.

μισθὸς τριῶν μηνῶν, 'three months' pay.'

II. Predicate genitive. (1) The limiting genitive may be used as a predicate.

αἱ κῶμαι Παρυσάτιδος ἦσαν, 'the villages belonged to Parysatis,' Anab. I. iv. 9.

(2) The partitive genitive is also often found as a predicate after verbs of calling, etc.

Σόλων τῶν ἐπὶ σοφιστῶν ἐκλήθη, 'Solon was called one of the seven wise men.'

With this compare Acc. Rule No. VI.

GENITIVE WITH VERBS.

III. The genitive may be used as the object of a verb. This is often the case when the verb affects the object only in part. Genitive meaning 'of.'

Such verbs are those meaning 'to share,' 'enjoy,' 'hit,' 'miss,' 'aim,' 'begin,' 'lead,' 'rule,' 'take hold of,' 'touch,' 'perceive,'¹ 'hear,' 'see,' 'taste,' 'smell,' 'remember,' 'forget.'

Examples:

τῆς πολιτείας μεταδιδόναι, 'to give a share in the citizenship,' Lys. 25, 3.

ἄρχειν τῆς πληγῆς, 'to strike the first blow.'

ἀκούω τούτου λέγοντος, 'I hear him speaking.'

ὥς ὥσφραντο τάχιστα τῶν καμήλων οἱ ἵπποι . . . ἀνέστρεφον, 'quick as ever the horses caught scent of the camels they wheeled around,' Hdt. I. 80.

IV. Also with verbs denoting separation, comparison, source. Ablative genitive (from).

I. Such verbs are those meaning 'to deprive,' 'to remove,' 'to spare,' 'to release,' 'to abandon,' 'to differ,' 'to surpass,' 'to be inferior to,' 'to be full of,' 'to want.'² ἐπίσχες τοῦ δρόμου, 'stop running!' Ar. Av. 1200.

Examples:

φείδου τοῦ πεσόντος, 'spare the fallen.'

¹ Verbs of perception (hearing, seeing, etc.) are also classed among those governing genitive denoting 'whence.'

² Verbs of fulness and want are sometimes classed under III.

καὶ τούτου . . . οὐχ ἡττησόμεθα, 'and we shall not be inferior to him,' Anab. II. iii. 23.

δέομαι ὑμῶν, 'I beg of you,' Lys. 25, 3.

ἐδέησεν ὀλίγου, 'he lacked little' (i. e. 'came near'), Xen.

2. The genitive may denote the source from which anything is obtained, often with an accusative of the thing.

ἄνακτος αὐτοῦ πάντα πείσομαι λόγον, 'I shall learn the whole story from my lord himself,' Aesch. Ag. 582.

V. Genitive of cause, crime, or value.

1. The genitive denotes the cause, especially with verbs of praise, pity, anger, and revenge.

ἑαυτὸν εὐδαιμονίζει τῆς μεταβολῆς, 'he congratulates himself on his change of abode,' Pl. Rep. 516, c.

οὐ ζηλῶ σε τῆς παιδείσεως, 'I don't envy you your education,' Ar. Thesm. 175.

2. The genitive of cause is used in exclamations.

ὦ Πόσειδον, τοῦ χειμῶνος, 'Poseidon! what a storm!'

Ἡράκλεις, τῆς ἀκριβολογίας, 'Heracles! what fine distinctions,' Luc. Vit. Auct. 26.

3. Verbs of accusing, acquitting, condemning, and convicting take the genitive of the crime.

διώξομαί σε δειλίας, 'I will indict you for cowardice,' Ar. Eq. 368.

N. B. Compounds of κατά take genitive of person and accusative of crime or punishment.

4. Verbs of buying, selling, and valuing take the genitive of price or value.

πόσου δέ ἐστι; 'how much is he?'

εἴκοσι μνῶν, 'twenty minae.'

πολλοῦ λέγεις, 'you name a high price.'

VI. Genitive after Compound Verbs. Verbs compounded with (the appropriate) prepositions may take the genitive.

ὑπερεφάνησαν τοῦ λόφου, 'they appeared above the hill,' Thuc. IV. 93.

More often a preposition (the same or another) follows with its appropriate case.

(Without prep.) πρὶν ἂν Ζεὺς ἐκπέσῃ τυραννίδος, 'till Zeus fall from his sovereignty,' Aesch. Prom. 775.

(With prep.) ἐκ τοῦ σταυρώματος ἐξέπιπτον, 'they rushed forth from the stockade,' Xen.

GENITIVE WITH ADJECTIVES AND ADVERBS.

VII. The objective genitive follows many verbal adjectives or adverbs derived from them.

ἐμπειρος κακῶν, 'experienced in misfortune.'

So adverbs, οἱ ἐμπείρως αὐτοῦ ἔχοντες, 'those well acquainted with him.'

These adjectives are chiefly kindred to verbs which take the genitive; see above.

Some of the more common are the following, with their opposites: — μνήμων, 'mindful of;' ἐγκρατής, 'master of;' ἔμπειρος, 'experienced in;' ἴδιος, 'peculiar to;' κοινός, 'in common with;' ἱερός, 'sacred to;' πλήρης and μεστός, 'full of;' ἐνδεής, 'lacking in;' μέτοχος, 'partaking of;' ἄξιος, 'worthy of;' αἷτιος, 'guilty of.'

The student will bear in mind that the objective genitive is often to be translated in English by 'for,' 'in,' etc.

VIII. Comparatives, whether adjectives or adverbs, may take the genitive. Cf. No. IV.

ᾠτά ἐστι ἀπιστότερα ὀφθαλμῶν, 'ears are more untrustworthy than eyes,' Hdt. I. 8.

IX. Adverbs. Besides the use of adverbs in Nos. VII. and VIII., the genitive is used with many adverbs of place and time, such as ποῦ; 'where?' ποῖ; 'whither?' οὐδαμοῦ, 'nowhere;' ἐντός, εἴσω, 'within;' ἐκτός, ἔξω, 'without;' μεταξύ, 'between;' ἐγγύς, πλησίον, 'near;' ἄνω, 'up;' κάτω, 'down;' πρόσθεν, 'in front;' ὀπίσθεν, 'behind;' ὀψέ, 'late;' πολλάκις, 'frequently.' E. g.

πηνίκε' ἐστὶ τῆς ἡμέρας; 'what time of day is it;' Ar. Av. 1498.

X. Genitive with prepositions. The genitive only is used after the prepositions ἀντί, ἀπό, ἐξ, and πρό.

It is one of the cases used after διά, κατά, μετά, ὑπέρ, and ἐπί, παρά, περί, πρός, ὑπό. ἀμφί with the genitive is rare in prose.

The "improper" prepositions ἀνευ, 'without;' πλήν, 'except;' ἄχρι and μέχρι, 'until;' ἕνεκα, 'for the sake of,' take the genitive.

XI. Genitive of Time. The genitive denotes the time within which anything takes place; e. g. ἡμέρας, 'by day;' νυκτός, 'by night;' θέρους, 'in summer.'

οὐ δέκα ἡμερῶν, 'not within ten days.' Cf. also the use of dative with ἐν, Anab. I. vii. 18, ἐν ταύταις ταῖς ἡμέραις. So ἐν θέρει, 'in summer.'

XII. Genitive Absolute. A noun and a participle may stand by themselves in the genitive.

τούτων οὕτως ἔχόντων, χαίρω, 'since this is so, I rejoice.'

§ 65. Dative Case. Meanings: 'to,' 'for,' 'in,' 'at,' 'by,' 'with.'

The dative case has absorbed many of the meanings of the lost ablative and the locative case. It may therefore be considered:

1. As a real dative. 'To' or 'for.'
2. As an ablative dative. 'By,' 'with,' etc.
3. As a locative dative. 'In,' 'at.'

CAUTION. Do not express motion to or toward by the dative, but by a preposition and accusative.

I. The dative is the case of the Indirect Object.

1. After transitive verbs (translate 'to').

τὴν ἐπιστολὴν δίδωσι πιστῷ ἀνδρί, 'he gives the letter to a trusty man.'

2. After many intransitives (omit 'to'), meaning 'To benefit,' 'befit,' and 'advise,'
'To serve,' 'obey,' and 'exhort,'
'To reproach,' 'envy,' and 'abuse,' and their likes and opposites.

ἐλοιδορεῖτο αὐτῷ, 'he railed-at him.'

3. The Dative of Interest.

(a) The dative of interest or reference may generally be translated 'for.' It may qualify a whole sentence or, like the possessive genitive, a single word.

τὰ ὄπλα τοῖς στρατιώταις ἐπὶ ἁμαξῶν ἤγοντο, 'the soldiers had their arms carried for them on wagons.' τῶν στρατιωτῶν would have meant possession only.

τοῖσιν ἀνέστη, 'he rose up for (i. e. to address) them,' H.

(b) Here belongs the "ethical" dative of the personal pronouns.

ὦ μήτηρ, ὡς καλός μοι ὁ πάππος, 'O mother, how handsome my grandfather is!' Xen. Cyr. 1, 3, 2.

(c) The dative of possession is used with εἰμί, γίγνομαι, etc.

ἵππος ἐστὶν ἐμοί, 'I have a horse.'

(d) Agent. The dative may express the agent after passive verbs in the perfect and pluperfect, and does so regularly after the verbal adjective in -τέος.

ταῦτα ὑμῖν ποιητέον ἐστίν, 'this must be done by you.'

Otherwise the agent is expressed by ὑπό and genitive.

4. The dative may follow adjectives and adverbs of kindred meaning to the verbs which take the dative.

τῷ ἐμῷ ἀδελφῷ πολέμιος, ἐμοὶ δὲ φίλος καὶ πιστός, 'hostile to my brother, friendly and faithful to me.'

II. Dative of Association and Accompaniment (ablative dative).

1. The dative is used with all words of resemblance, union, and approach. This includes verbs, adjectives, adverbs, and nouns.

μάχεσθαι τοῖς Θηβαίοις, 'to fight with the Thebans.

ὁμοία ταῖς δούλαις ἐσθής, 'raiment like (that of) the slaves.'

2. The dative denotes that by which any person or thing is accompanied.

ἐξελαύνει . . . ἰδρύντι τῷ ἵππῳ, 'he rides up with his horse in a sweat,' Anab. I. viii. 1.

This use is frequent in military phrases.

ἐλαύνει . . . συντεταγμένῳ τῷ στρατεύματι παντί, 'he marches with all the army drawn up,' Anab. I. vii. 14.

III. The dative only is used with the prepositions ἐν (and σύν).

Although Xenophon frequently uses σύν, the student must use it but seldom. It is not frequent in Attic prose. Use the dative alone, or ἔχων, etc.

The dative is one of the cases used with ἐπί, παρά, πρός, ὑπό.

Examples of ἐν : 'ἐν νήσῳ, 'on an island ;' ἐν ὄπλοις, 'under arms ;' ἐν τῇ ὑπερβολῇ, 'during the crossing ;' ἐν ὀργῇ, 'in anger ;' ἐν Ἰσσοῖς, 'at Issi.'

IV. Many verbs compounded with ἐν, σύν, or ἐπί, and some with πρός, παρά, περί, and ὑπό take the dative ; e. g. προσέβαλον ἀλλήλοις, 'they attacked each other,' Thuc. ; but we also find πρὸς ἀλλήλους.

V. The dative denotes cause, manner, means, instrument, respect, and degree of difference.

1. Cause : τοῦτ' ἐποίησεν ἀγνοία, 'he did it from ignorance.' This is also expressed by ὑπό and genitive : ὑπ' ἀγνοίας.

2. Manner : ἐπήλθον πολλῷ θορύβῳ, 'they came on with much confusion.'

3. Means or instrument : αὐτὸν ἀκοντίζει παλτῷ, 'he strikes him with a javelin.'

4. Respect : τοσοῦτον πλήθει περιῆν, 'so much was he superior in numbers,' Anab. I. viii. 13.

5. Degree of difference : τῇ κεφαλῇ μείων, 'a head shorter.' τοσοῦτῳ ἄμεινον, '(by) so much the better.'

VI. The dative of Time (Locative dative).

The particular day, night, month, year, or festivals, etc., may be put in the dative with an adjective and without a preposition ; e. g. ταύτῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, 'that day.' Παναθηναίοις, 'at the Panathenaea.'

Otherwise add preposition ἐν, 'at,' 'in,' 'on;' e. g. ἐν θέρει, 'in summer;' ἐν τῷ παρόντι, 'at present.'

In poetry the locative dative is often used without the prepositions ἐν, παρά, etc. Always add preposition in prose.

§ 66. Vocative Case.

The vocative is the case of direct address.

ὦ ἄνδρες στρατιῶται, 'fellow soldiers.'

In Greek ὦ is usually prefixed unless the speaker is in haste or under great excitement, as in threats, etc.; e. g. ἄνθρωπε, τί ποιεῖς; 'fellow! what are you doing?' Xen. Cyr. 2, 2, 7.

Generally speaking, the omission or insertion of ὦ is exactly the reverse of the English usage.

§ 67. A few Rules of Accent for Beginners.

 For fuller rules, with exceptions, see foot-notes.

The following summary of accent purposely ignores that which is exceptional and difficult to classify. Additional rules, explanations, and exceptions are added in foot-notes for more advanced students. While in some classes of nouns no satisfactory rules can be formulated, it is well for the student to realize at once that the great majority of Greek words in common use are accented according to well-established rules. This is the case with all verbs, participles, prepositions, and regular adverbs, and with many important categories of nouns and adjectives, both simple and compound.

The student should be taught to recognize that the accent in many instances has an organic connection with the formation of the word, — e. g. its derivation from noun or verb ; its active or passive meaning ; its growth from two or more simple words, or from one suffix or several. In this way a habit of observation and association may be formed, which will incidentally bring with it much more than a mere knowledge of accents.

In nouns, pronouns, and adjectives the rules given are for the nominative case, subject of course to the regular changes due to inflection.

It will be taken for granted that the student has already been taught the preliminary laws of Greek accent as given in the grammars. (G. §§ 106–135 ; H. §§ 95–120 : see also H. §§ 548 ff.) For convenience, however, some of the most common terms in use will be here given, with examples, and an explanation of the term ‘recessive accent.’

I. Recessive Accent.¹

By recessive accent is meant a tendency in Greek to throw the accent back from the end of the word

¹ This term is here retained pending the proof of objections to it or the invention of a better term. For a discussion of the subject, see toward the beginning. This tendency is found in many classes of words. With verbs, for example, it is the rule, and in compound words it is the prevailing accentuation. It assumes various forms according to the quantity of the syllables.

If the last syllable is short the accent retreats to the antepenult, e. g. ἔχετε, σύνδουλος, or in dissyllabic words becomes circumflex on the penult if that is long, e. g. εἶχον, βῶλος, if the penult is short the accent is acute on the penult, e. g. ἔχε, τρόπος. If the last syllable is long the accent can retreat no farther than the acute on the penult, e. g. εἰχέτην, ἀνθρώπου.

If the word is a monosyllable, the accent, if recessive, will be circumflex, e. g. βῆν (= ἔβην), γῆ.

From these examples it will be seen that the position of the accent, when recessive, is controlled by the quantity of the final syllable, and the kind of accent by the quantity of the syllable on which it falls (of course within the limits to which the circumflex accent is confined).

If, now, the student will accustom himself to think of a short syllable as the unit of measure, and a long syllable as containing two such units, the following principles will become clear.

The acute accent in Greek¹ holds out, so to speak, over three such units only; hence the following Bloomfield, Amer. Jour. of Philol., vol. iv. and vol. ix. Also Wheeler, "Der Griechische Nominalaccent," Strassburg, 1885.

Rule: The acute cannot retreat beyond the antepenult.

The circumflex accent may be described as a method of representing that the acute accent stands on the first half of a syllable long by nature; e. g. $\hat{\omega} = \acute{\omega}$ or $\acute{o} + o$. From the rule just given we therefore obtain the following

Rule: The circumflex can retreat only as far as the penult, and that too only when the last syllable is short.

$\beta\hat{\omega}\lambda\omicron\varsigma = \acute{\acute{\omega}}\cup (3, 2, 1)$; but $\beta\acute{\omega}\lambda\omicron\upsilon = \acute{\acute{\omega}}\acute{\acute{\omega}} (4, 3, 2, 1)$; so $\acute{\alpha}\nu\theta\rho\acute{\omega}\pi\omicron\upsilon$, $\acute{\alpha}\xi\iota\omicron\upsilon$, etc. In long monosyllables the accent, when recessive, retreats upon the first half; e. g. $\beta\acute{\eta}\nu = \acute{\acute{\eta}}\cup$, $\gamma\acute{\eta}$, etc.

One puzzling exception occurs. In recessive accent of words of more than two syllables, the Greek disregarded the quantity of the penult, and allowed the acute to stand on the fourth unit from the end in words with a long penult; e. g. $\acute{\epsilon}\chi\eta\tau\epsilon$, $\acute{\alpha}\nu\theta\rho\omega\pi\omicron\varsigma = \acute{\acute{\acute{\acute{\omega}}}}\cup (4, 3, 2, 1)$, but genitive $\acute{\alpha}\nu\theta\rho\acute{\omega}\pi\omicron\upsilon$. This has not yet been satisfactorily explained.¹ The rule in full therefore is: —

Rule for Recessive Accent. The accent, if recessive, is placed as far from the end of the word as the last syllable permits, counting the penult as a unit whether long or short. $\acute{\alpha}\nu\theta\rho\omega\pi\omicron\varsigma$, $\acute{\alpha}\nu\theta\rho\acute{\omega}\pi\omicron\upsilon$, $\acute{\epsilon}\chi\epsilon\tau\omicron\upsilon$, $\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\iota}\chi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\eta\nu$, $\acute{\text{Μ}}\acute{\omicron}\acute{\upsilon}\acute{\sigma}\alpha$, $\acute{\text{Μ}}\acute{\omicron}\acute{\upsilon}\acute{\sigma}\eta\varsigma$, $\acute{\text{Μ}}\omicron\upsilon\sigma\acute{\acute{\omega}}\nu (= \acute{\acute{\acute{\acute{\alpha}}}}\omega\nu)$.

¹ There may be observed in the language a disinclination to the paroxytone accent of trochaic endings, or, more plainly, to accenting the penult of trochaic polysyllables; e. g. $\acute{\acute{\acute{\acute{\epsilon}}}}\gamma\omega\gamma\epsilon$, ($\acute{\acute{\acute{\acute{\epsilon}}}}\gamma\acute{\acute{\acute{\acute{\acute{\omega}}}}$ and $\acute{\acute{\acute{\acute{\acute{\gamma}}}}\epsilon$). So also $\acute{\acute{\acute{\acute{\acute{\lambda}}}}}\omicron\gamma\omicron\pi\omicron\iota\acute{\acute{\acute{\acute{\acute{\omega}}}}\varsigma$, etc.

2. Oxytone (ὀξύς, 'sharp,' and τόνος). The acute on the ultima is called oxytone. χῆν, χηνός, βασιλεύς.

3. Paroxytone (παρά +). The acute on the penult is called paroxytone. παρθένος, πηλίκος, πολίτης, τούτου.

4. Proparoxytone (πρό +). The acute on the antepenult is called proparoxytone. ἄνθρωπος, ἡμέτερος, ἔλαθον.

5. Perispomenon (περισπάω, 'turn around,' i. e. ~ ^). The circumflex on the ultima is called perispomenon. Ζεῦ, τιμῶν, ὀπλιτῶν.

6. Properispomenon (πρό +). The circumflex on the penult is called properispomenon. οὗτος, ἐκεῖνος, προσεῖπε.

7. Barytone (βαρύς, 'deep,' +). A word is called barytone when it has no accent on the last syllable. See nos. 3, 4, 6.

8. Proclitic (πρό + κλίνω, 'incline'). A proclitic is a word which throws its accent forward upon the following word. The proclitics are

- (a) The forms of the article without τ, i. e. ὁ, ἡ, οἱ, αἱ.
- (b) The four prepositions εἰς (ἐς), ὡς, ἐκ (ἐξ), ἐν.
- (c) The conjunctions εἰ, 'if' and ὥς, 'as.'
- (d) The negative οὐ (οὐκ, οὐχ).

9. Enclitic (έν + κλίνω). An enclitic is a word which throws its accent back upon the preceding word. For rules of accent see grammar (G. §§ 142-146. H. §§ 115, 116).

The most common enclitics are :

- (a) The pronouns μου, μοί, μέ, σοῦ, σοί, σέ, οὐ, οἶ, ἐ, σφίσι.
- (b) The indefinite τις throughout.
- (c) The present indicative of εἰμί and φημί (except εἶ and φηῖ).
- (d) Indefinite adverbs like ποῦ, ποθεν, ποτέ, etc.
- (e) The particles γέ, τέ, τοί, πέρ, and -δε.

§ 68.¹ Verbs have recessive accent; e. g. λύετον, λῦε.

But the accent in compound verbs cannot precede the augment, e. g. προσεῖπον, nor precede the syllable of the word

2. For accent of enclitics see G. §§ 142 ff.; H. §§ 113-119.

3. The following infinitives accent the penult:—

First aorist active; e. g. βουλεύσαι.

The perfect passive (middle); e. g. λελύσθαι.

All infinitives in -ναι; e. g. λελυκέναι, λυθῆναι, ἰστάναι, etc.

The second aorist middle; e. g. λαβέσθαι; and the active, which is perispomenon because contracted; e. g. λαβέειν > λαβεῖν. G. § 131 (notes); H. §§ 389, 390.

4. The following imperatives are irregular. G. § 131. H. § 387.

(a) The second aorist middle second singular is perispomenon; e. g. λαβοῦ; but when compounded with a dissyllabic preposition the accent is recessive; e. g. κατάθου.

(b) The second aorist active in five verbs is oxytone, i. e. ἰδέ, ἐπέ, ἐλθέ, εὐρέ, and λαβέ. But not their compounds, which are regular.

5. In optatives of the μ inflection the accent cannot precede the mood suffix -ι-; e. g. ἴσταίτε. H. § 388.

prefixed which originally had an accent, e. g. ἀπόδος (except when the vowel is lost, e. g. πάρειμι), nor precede the member first prefixed, e. g. συνέκδος.

§ 69.¹ Participles have recessive accent; e. g. λύσας, λύσασα, λύσαν, λυόμενος, λύων.

The following are important exceptions:

1. All participles in -ας (except first aorist active); all in -εις, -υς, -ους, -ως; and second aorist active in -ων are oxytone; e. g. ἰστάς, τιθείς, δεικνύς, διδούς, λευκώς, λαβών.

2. Perfect passive (or middle) participles are paroxytone; e. g. λελυμένος.

§ 70.² Adverbs are accented like the corresponding forms of the adjective; e. g. σοφῶς (adjective, gen. pl. σοφῶν), ἀληθῶς (ἀληθῶν), σοφώτερον, σοφώτατα, ἀληθέστερον, ἀληθέστατα, ἥδιον, ἥδιστα.

§ 71.³ Prepositions are oxytone; e. g. ἀνά, ἀντί, ἐπί, κατά, etc.

² § 70. Irregular adverbs, formed by adding suffixes, etc., vary too much to be reduced to rule. It will be useful to notice enclitic adverbial endings like -θι, -θεν, -δε, (-φι, -φιν), etc., multiplicatives in -άκις, oxytones in -δόν, -αδόν, -ηδόν, and others.

³ § 71. The only exceptions are the four proclitics, ἐκ, ἐν, εἰς, and ὧς, and five of the "improper" prepositions, i. e. ἀνευ, ἄτερ, ἄχρι, μέχρι, and ἔνεκα, which are recessive.

Except also when they 'suffer' anastrophe. G. § 116; H. § 109. For the true explanation of anastrophe see Bloomfield, Am. Jour. Phil., iv. 24.

§ 72.¹ Pronouns.

1. Personal and reflexive pronouns are oxytone. αὐτός is here included. E. g. ἐγώ, σύ, οὖ (acute > circumflex in genitive and dative), ἐμαυτοῦ, σεαυτοῦ, ἐαυτοῦ (αὐτοῦ).

2. Demonstratives accent the penult; e. g. οὗτος, ὅδε, ἐκεῖνος.

3. Interrogative and relative pronouns are accented on the first syllable; e. g. τίς; (τίνος;), ὅς, ὅστις.

§ 73. Nouns.

To understand the accent of nouns (or adjectives) it is usually necessary to know whether the word is simple or compounded. In many classes of words the accent changes in composition. The following classification may be made.

1. Uncompounded: (a) Monosyllables. (b) Polysyllables.
2. Compounds.

First Declension (Uncompounded).

N. B. No masculine is oxytone except some verbal derivatives in -της.

¹ § 72. 1. Possessive adjective pronouns vary; e. g. ἐμός, σός, τός, but those in -τερος are recessive, e. g. ἡμέτερος, etc.; see comparatives.

2. Also compounds of οὗτος, e. g. τοιούτος.

EXCEPTIONS. (a) The comparative and superlative forms ἔτερος and ἑκαστος are recessive according to rule, § 77 (3).

(b) when ὁ demonstrativum is added the accent is oxytone, e. g. οὗτοςί, τουτουί.

3. Also the corresponding pronominal adjectives, e. g. πόσος, ποῖος, etc. (but πηλίκος). When the syllable δ- is prefixed, as in δ-ποῖος, δ-πόσος, the accent is unchanged.

4. The indefinite τις either loses its accent or is accented on the last syllable (i. e. grave or circumflex).

I. Masculines.¹

1. All words in -ας are paroxytone ; e. g. ταμίας, Ξενίας.

2. All words in -ης (-της, -ιτης, -ωτης, etc.) are paroxytone ; e. g. τοξότης, στρατιώτης, οϊκέτης, όπλίτης, Πέρσης.

1. Contracts are perispomenon ; e. g. Ἑρμῆς.

2. Nominal derivatives. All derivatives from nouns and adjectives are paroxytone ; e. g. στρατιώτης.

3. Paroxytone verbal derivatives in -της. All with a short penult are paroxytone except κρι-τής and εὔρε-τής, also those which add -της to the pure unstrengthened verb stem ; e. g. οϊκέ-της, ὕφάν-της.

4. Oxytone verbal derivatives in -της. All with a lengthened vowel in the penult ; some from liquid verbs ; polysyllables in -σ-της ; those in -κ-της (from verbs in -άζω, etc.). Examples : γεννη-τής, 'a parent' (vs. γεννήτης, 'a clansman') θεα-τής, βουλευτής, καθαρτής, δικαστής, ὀρηγιστής, σαλπικτής.

☞ There are a few real or apparent exceptions to the above rules, e. g. αἰχμητής, κυβερνήτης, σφενδονήτης (√?). ἐθελοντής, and ἐκοντής, used like adjectives and derived from participial forms, are oxytone. See Götting, Accentlehre, p. 125.

II. Add 3. Abstracts in -ία and -εία are recessive ; e. g. σοφία, 'wisdom ;' ἀλήθεια, 'truth.'

4. Collectives and concrete nouns in -ια and -εια are oxytone ; e. g. ἰωνιδά, 'a bed of violets ;' στρατιά, 'an army ;' παιδιά, 'a game.'

5. Other feminines are chiefly recessive.

Add III. COMPOUNDS.

1. All with a long ultima (except dissyllabic oxytones not compounded with prepositions) retain the accent of their last factor ; e. g. φιλο-σοφία, ὑπο-κριτής (but ὄνειρο-κρίτης, ἰστο-δόκη (δοκή)).

2. All with short ultima have recessive accent when compounded ; e. g. πρόπειρα (√πειρα).

3. When the last member does not exist as a separate word in this form, the accent is recessive ; e. g. κωμάρχης, εὐσέβεια.

3. Except certain verbal derivatives which are oxytone, i. e.

(a) Two only with a short penult, i. e. κρι-τής and εὔρετής.

(b) (Nearly) all with a long penult; e. g. ποιη-τής (√ποιέω), δικαστής (√δικάζω), βουλευτής (√βουλεύω).

II. Feminines.

1. Verbal derivatives in a and η are oxytone. (This is especially the case where the stem vowel is changed.) E. g. στολή (√στέλλω), σπονδή (√σπένδω), τομή (√τέμνω), τιμή (√τιμάω).

2. All in ᾱ (gen. ης) are recessive; e. g. Μοῦσα, τράπεζα.

§ 74. Second Declension (Uncompounded).

The following suffixes are the most commonly used, i. e. -ος (-ον), ιος, -κος, -λος, -μος, -νος, -ρος, -τος. It will require a little care to tell in some words whether the suffix is simply -ος or one of the others; e. g. νόμ-ος, ἀγ-ός, δρόμ-ος, τροπ-ός, τροχ-ός are all formed with the suffix -ος, not with -γος, -μος, -πος, etc., as they are sometimes classified, much to the student's bewilderment.

There are also many secondary suffixes formed from the above; e. g. -ικος, -ακος, -ιμος, -αμος, -αλος, etc.¹

The simple suffix -ος is very common in nouns, it is less so in adjectives, which usually have -κος, -λος, -μος, etc., or even some secondary suffix, as -ικος, ιμος, etc.¹

1. Nomina agentis. Nouns in -ος expressing the agent are oxytone; e. g. τροχ-ός (√τρέχω), 'a runner,' 'a wheel;' τροπ-ός (√τρέπω), 'a thole strap;' τροφ-ός (√τρέφω), 'a nurse;' ἀγ-ός (√ἄγω), 'a leader.'

2. Nomina actionis. Nouns in -ος expressing an action (or a quality, or a thing done or made) are recessive. The tendency is to accent the stem syllable; e. g. τρόχ-ος (√τρέχω), 'a course;' τρόπ-ος (√τρέπω), 'a turn,' 'manner;' λόγ-ος (√λέγω), 'a speech;' σπόρ-ος (√σπείρω), 'a sowing,' 'seed;' ὀκν-ος (√ὀκνέω), 'hesitation;' πόν-ος (√πένομαι), 'labor.'

3. Verbal derivatives in -μος and -τος are oxytone; e. g. λογισ-μός, κωκυ-τός.

cially polysyllables), others generally recessive; e. g. θεωρός, θάλαμος (exc. is ποταμός), στέφανος (exc. is οὐρανός).

¹ § 74. It may help the student to know that in the second declension more than twice as many masculine nouns with suffix -ος are barytone than oxytone; the neuter nouns are almost all barytone. Adjectives on the other hand are mostly oxytone. Feminine nouns with the corresponding suffix (α, η) have twice as many oxytones as barytones. (Schröder, Redetheile im Griechischen u. Lateinischen, p. 123.)

4. Neuters are recessive; e. g. τὸ ἔργον, τὸ ὄπλον, τὸ δρέπανον.

Adjectives used as nouns retain their accent; e. g. τὸ κακόν, τὸ καλόν; and verbals, as τὸ φυτόν.

5. *Diminutives*¹ accent the first syllable of the suffix; e. g. τειχ-ύδριον, εἰδ-ύλλιον. From οἶκος come οἶκ-ίσκος, οἶκ-ίον, οἶκ-ίδιον.

§ 75. Compound Nouns of the Second Declension.

1. If the second part is an active verbal it receives the accent. Trochaic endings (i. e. — ∪) are oxytone, others (∪ ∪ ∪, — ∪ ∪) are paroxytone; e. g. λοχ-ᾱγός (√ᾱγω), 'a captain;' στρατ-ηγός, 'a general;' σκυτο-τόμος (√τέμνω), 'a cobbler;' δισκο-βόλος (√βύλλω), 'a quoit thrower.'

2. If the second part is derived from a noun, the accent is recessive; e. g. φιλό-λογος, 'a philologist;' ἵππο-πόταμος, 'a river-horse;' θέ-οινος, 'wine-god;' οἰνό-πεδον, 'vineyard.' Also all those compounded with a preposition (even verbals); e. g. σύν-δουλος, 'fellow-slave;' μέθ-οδος, 'method;' ὁ διάβολος, 'the slanderer.'

NOTES. 1. Diminutives in -ίσκος are all paroxytone, notwithstanding their trochaic ending.

2. Polysyllables, and some trisyllables, in -ιον are recessive.

3. If the diminutive suffix has more than three syllables the accent is of course proparoxytone; e. g. παιδ-ισκάριον.

§ 76. Third Declension.¹

I. The following classes of nouns are oxytone :

(a) All in -αν or -ην (-ηνος or -ενος) ; e. g. παιάν, ποιμήν.

(b) All in -εως ; e. g. βασιλεύς, ἱππεύς.

(c) Feminines in -ας (-άδος) ; e. g. ἡ Ἑλλάς.

(d) Masculines in -ηρ ; e. g. ὁ πατήρ, ὁ ἀήρ, ὁ ἀστήρ (but feminine, ἡ μήτηρ, etc.).

(e) All collectives, words of locality, place, and time, and names of months, with the suffix -ων (-ῶνος) ; e. g. ἀμπελῶν, 'vineyard ;' μυλῶν, 'mill ;' αἰών, 'age ;' χειμῶν, 'winter ;' Ἑκατομβαιῶν, 'Hecatombaeon.'

(f) Feminines and national names in -ων (-όνος) ; e. g. ἡ εἰκών, 'image ;' Μακεδῶν, 'a Macedonian.'

II. Other masculine and feminine nouns are chiefly recessive ; e. g. ἡ δύναμις, ὁ ἄναξ, ἡ κλίμαξ.

¹ § 76. Monosyllables. Short monosyllables are necessarily oxytone. Long monosyllables are either oxytone or perispomenon.

(a) Masculine and feminine monosyllables are generally oxytone ; e. g. μήν, χήν, χθών, θήρ, χεῖρ, πούς, αἶξ, βίς, Ζεύς, etc. The most common exceptions are ναῦς, βοῦς, γραῦς, μῦς, ὕς (σῦς), δρῦς, γλαῦξ (also γλαύξ), and many proper names.

Contract words are perispomenon ; e. g. ἦρ, οἷς, παῖς.

(b) Neuter monosyllables are perispomenon. As this is a form of recessive accent, it agrees with § 76, III., "All neuters are recessive." E. g. οὖς, πῦρ, all indeclinable words like names of letters, e. g. μῦ, νῦ, ξῖ, πῖ.

§ 76. IV. Compound nouns of Third Declension.

(a) Compounds of monosyllables retract the accent ; e. g. Αἰγί-παν, 'goat-Pan.' There are but few real nouns ; e. g. ἀντί-χθων (sc. γῆ), ἀντί-χειρ (sc. δάκτυλος).

(b) Compounds from polysyllables usually retain the accent of their last member (except oxytones in -ην and -αν, which become paroxytone, and some exceptions in -ηρ) ; e. g. Δη-μήτηρ, ὑπογραμματεῦς.

III. All neuters are recessive; e. g. τὸ εὖρος, τὸ στράτευμα.

§ 77. Adjectives.¹

First and Second Declensions (Uncompounded).

1. Adjectives of the first and second declensions ending in -ος, -κος, -λος, -μος, -νος, -ρος, -τος are chiefly oxytone; e. g. σοφ-ός, χθαμα-λός, θερ-μός, ἰλα-ρός, αἰνε-τός.

¹ § 77. NOTES. (a) Some very common exceptions of adjectives in -ος are the following: φίλος, νέος, μέσος, μόνος, ἴσος, ὀλίγος, ὅλος.

(b) -κος. Exceptions are the paroxytone diminutives in -ισκος.

(c) -λος. There a number of paroxytone and recessive exceptions.

(d) -ρος. There are a few exceptions. But all comparatives (and others in -τερος like ἡμέτερος, ἐκάτερος) are recessive according to rule.

(e) -μος. These vary. Those in -αμος and -ισμος are oxytone; -ιμος regularly, and other secondaries chiefly, recessive.

(f) -νος. Many in -νος are oxytone. The secondary suffixes -υνος, -ινος, etc., chiefly recessive. N. B. -ινος, meaning 'made of' or 'pertaining to,' is recessive; e. g. ἀμυγδαλινός, 'of almonds; ἐλεφάντινος, 'of ivory;' but -ινος, 'in time of,' is oxytone; e. g. ἐσπερινός, 'at even,' χειμερινός, θερινός, etc.

(g) -τος. Verbals in -τος and -τεος accent the suffix; e. g. διδασ-τός, 'ought to be taught,' δρατός, γραπ-τέον, πρακτέος. Superlatives are recessive according to rule. Numerals in -τος are recessive except those in -οστος, oxytone; e. g. δέκατος, εἰκοστός.

§ 77. 2. παλαι-ός (πάλαι) is an adjective in -ος, and βέβαιος is reduplicated. Many of the properispomena come from oxytone nouns; e. g. ἀρχαῖος (ἄρχή), ἀμοιβαῖος (ἀμοιβή), κορυφαῖος (κορυφή); others from recessive nouns; e. g. βίαιος (βία), δίκαιος (δίκη), and seem to be accented accordingly.

§ 77. 4. For contract adjectives see G. § 311; H. § 223.

N. B. Many, but not all, derivative suffixes like -ικος, -αλος, -ηλος, -αμος, -ιμος, -ινος, -ανος, etc., are included in the above rule. Some of these are regularly oxytone, e. g. all in -ικος; some are regularly recessive, e. g. those in -ιμος. All comparatives (-τερος) and all superlatives (-τατος) are recessive.

2. Adjectives in -ιος are recessive; some are proparoxytone and some properispomenon (-αῖος = -ά + -ιος, -ειος, -οιος, -υιος are to be here included); e. g. ἄγριος, ἄλιος, ἀρχαῖος (ῥαρχή), δίκαιος (ῥδίκη), μάταιος (ῥμάτην).

3. All comparatives and superlatives (of first, second, and third declensions) are recessive; e. g. σοφώτερος, ἀληθέστατος, ἥδιον, ἥδιον, ἥδιστος.

§ 78.¹ Compound Adjectives of First and Second Declensions.

1. If the second part is an active verbal, it receives the accent. Trochaic endings (—υ) are oxytone, others paroxytone; ὕμνο-ποιός, 'making hymns;'

¹ § 78. NOTES. These compounds are numerous and important; and their composition, meaning, and accent should be carefully observed.

2. Compound substantival derivatives in -ινος, meaning 'in time of,' remain oxytone; e. g. μετοπωρινός, 'autumnal.' Those in -ικος remain oxytone; e. g. περιεκτικός.

§ 78. 4. Multiplicatives in -πλος are paroxytone; e. g. διπλός, 'double.'

ἄρματο-πηγός, 'making chariots;' μισθο-φόρος, 'receiving pay;' ἵππο-τρόφος, 'keeping horses;' λαιμο-τόμος, 'throat-cutting' (for λαιμότομος see 2); παιδο-κτόνος, 'child-slaying' (N. B. παιδό-κτονος would mean 'slain by a child;' see 2).

Verbals compounded with preposition^s ἀ privative, etc., are exceptions; see 2.

2. Substantive derivatives, passive verbals, and those compounded with prepositions, with ἀ privative (also εὖ, δυσ-, ἀεί, ἀρι-, ἐρι-, πάλιν, ἡμι-), are recessive; e. g. (from substantives) ὀκτά-μηνος, 'eight months old;' βαρύ-τονος, 'deep toned;' μισό-λογος, 'hating argument;' (passives) νεό-φονος, 'lately slain;' λαιμό-τομος, 'with the throat cut;' (prepositions, etc.) διά-φορος, 'different;' περί-δρομος, 'running around;' ἄγραφος, 'unwritten;' εὐ-άγωγος, 'easy to lead.'

3. Reduplicated adjectives are recessive. This is a form of compound words. E. g. βάρ-βαρ-ος, βέ-βαιος, βέβηλος, δίδυμος, δαίδαλος, ἐτήτυμος, κάρχαρος, λάληθρος, μέρμερος, μαρμύρεος.

§ 79. Adjectives of the Third Declension.

1. Those in -υς and -ης are oxytone; ¹ e. g. ὀξύς, 'sharp;' βαρύς, 'heavy,' 'deep;' ψευδής, 'false;' πρηνής, 'prone.'

¹ There are only a few important exceptions, i. e. πλήρης, θήλυς, ἥμισυς, and several in -ις (-ιος).

2. Others with stems ending in a consonant are recessive;¹ e. g. μέλας (μελαν-), 'black;' πένης (πενητ-), 'poor;' χαρίεις (χαριεντ-), 'graceful.'

¹ The exceptions are: γυμνής, ψιλής, ἀργής, ἐκών, those in -ας (-αδος), and those in -ις (-ιδος), which have a corresponding masculine form. The comparatives of this declension are included in the rule. Like all comparatives they are recessive; e. g. βελτίων. N. B. They are recessive through the paradigm, e. g. βέλτιον.

EXERCISES. PART I.

[The teacher may supplement with Oral Exercises ; cf. p. 107. In translating, omit words enclosed within parentheses.]

I. ON THE BODY.

At Olympia¹ was found the beautiful² statue of Hermes made³ by Praxiteles.⁴ It had fallen head-foremost⁵ on its face in the sand⁶ that had been left behind by the Kladeos,⁷ when the river had over-flowed-its-banks and had flowed-round about the Heraeum⁸ where the statue stood. The head was uninjured⁹; the right arm was broken-off¹⁰ at the shoulder, but a part of the upper-arm, (reaching) nearly to the elbow, was also found.

X On the left arm Hermes carries the infant¹¹ Dionysus¹² but he has lost the first finger and thumb of the left hand. The child holds-out his left hand for something or other—perhaps a *bunch of grapes*¹³—that his brother held in the missing¹⁴ hand. The rest of the god is perfect (down) to the knees. From the knees (downward) the rest is missing¹⁴ except the right foot, which was afterwards found, together with the head of the boy.

The hair of Hermes is *short and curly*¹⁵; the brows project¹⁶ somewhat over the nose with slight¹⁷ depressions¹⁸ near the temples; the eyes look-(off)-into the distance¹⁹; the (half)-opened lips seem to smile. The body and limbs are strong like an athlete's²⁰; the chest broad²¹; the neck sinewy²²; the hand is large but beautiful and shapely.²³

If you wish to know how beautiful the statue is, look-at it (directly from) in front.

II. THE BODY. (Continued.)

The majority of¹ mankind have limbs and members as follows :² First,³ they have the head—on this the young have hair, while the old, poor wretches that they are,⁴ have the top-of⁵ the head bald nor do they have a single⁶ hair, but a long beard only. Secondly,⁸ they have ears on each⁷ side of the head ; then again, two eyes and a nose and the mouth, in which are the teeth and the tongue. Now⁸ the other⁹ members are numerous and varied, but⁹ from the heart flows the blood by the veins and arteries through the upper arm and the fore-arm into the ends of⁵ the fingers, and in like manner also into the toes. When the flesh and the entrails are wanting and the bones alone remain, the man turns into a skeleton.

III. POLYPHEMUS.

The Cyclops Polyphemus was a large giant.¹ His body was so large and his legs so long that when² he was walking even in the midst of the sea, the water wetted his³ knees and sometimes his³ thighs, but never wet his³ belly. When⁴ Odysseus and his companions were shut up in his cave, Polyphemus ate up with his strong jaws and teeth two of the companions at luncheon and at dinner, but when ⁵ he had dined he lay out flat-on-his-back in the cave, resting his stout neck upon the ground. Then ⁶ Odysseus, taking-his-stand ⁷ upon the Cyclops' great chest, put out with a hot bar ⁹ his ⁸ one solitary wheel-shaped eye, which was in the middle-of ⁸ his forehead.

Suggestion for Oral Exercise.

Who was Polyphemus?	He was a Cyclops.
How many eyes had he?	He had one solitary eye.
Where was his eye?	His eye was in the middle of his forehead.
Of what sort was his eye?	His eye was shaped like a wheel.

ποῖος ἦν οὗτος ὁ ὀφθαλμός ;	ἦν τροχοειδής, etc.

In oral exercises of this character require the student to repeat in his answer all the words of the question as far as possible. It will give quickness both to tongue and to ear.

IV. THERSITES.

Homer says that¹ Thersites was the ugliest man in the Greek army. (This is not hard to believe)² for² he was lame in³ one of his two feet, his two shoulders were humped, his head was sugar-loafed, and the hair grew thin on top. Now Odysseus hated him ; therefore, when⁴ Thersites reviled Agamemnon, Odysseus beat his⁵ back and shoulders with his golden sceptre so that Thersites stopped in fear,⁶ nor did words any longer fall from his lips, but tears — and that too⁷ not a few⁸ — fell from his eyes.

V. PRIAM. (On the Family.)

The name of the last king of Troy was Priam.* (He was called so) for¹ his sister Hesione bought him, paying a ransom to Heracles by whom² he had been captured. His father's name was Laomedon, his mother's Strymo, and his wife's name Hecuba. To Priam the king there were born fifty sons and fifty daughters. Now his³ eldest son Hector and his wife Andromache gave⁴ the old man no trouble,⁵ but his second son, Paris, or Alexander, troubled⁴ him much, both in other respects⁶ and especially⁶ in bringing⁷ Helen to Ilium, having stolen her away from her husband, Menelaus. Therefore the Greeks made an expedition from the Peloponnesus against Troy, commanded by Agamemnon,² the brother of Menelaus.

VI. PARIS.

When ¹ the Greeks, after ten years, had ² taken and ² burned ² Ilium, Agamemnon returned to Greece, taking with him Cassandra, one-of-the-daughters ³ of Priam. Virgil, the Roman poet, says that Priam was ⁴ killed by Pyrrhus, ⁵ the son of Achilles. Paris, wounded by Philoctetes and deprived of Helen, went-in-search-of ⁶ his first wife, Oenone ; but she, angered ⁷-at what-had-happened, ⁸ declared she would n't ⁹ nurse his wound. So Paris being-neglected ¹⁰ died and Oenone forthwith repenting, ¹¹ hanged herself and died also. ¹²

VII. PRIAM'S GRANDCHILDREN.

Polites, a son of Priam, was killed by Pyrrhus before-the-eyes ¹ of the old-man his ² father. Afterwards his son Priam, named-after his ² grandfather, came to Italy with his ² cousin Ascanius, who ³ was himself also a grandson of King Priam and the child of Cretsa and Aenēas. Hector, the boys' uncle, had already died ⁴ under-the-walls-of ⁵ Troy, and their aunt Andromache had been carried off as a slave ⁶ by Pyrrhus.

VIII. THE GREEK HOUSE.

The Greeks made their houses as-follows.¹ When² you knocked,¹⁰ the porter opened the door; and then entering through the door, you must needs⁸ be-ware-of the dog⁴ and pass through the front-hall into the peristyle of the men's-apartments. This peristyle was, as-a-rule, open-to-the-sky⁵ in the middle, and rectangular with four porticoes. Somewhere here you would find⁶ the master of the house walking about, and you would see many and all-sorts-of rooms arranged round-⁷ about; in these one could⁸ see tables and dining couches, chairs, beds, and other furniture such as was needed. Here also were the guest-chambers, unless the house happened to have⁹ an upper-story.

IX. THE HOUSE. (Continued.)

In large houses there was another peristyle in the rear and other rooms, all this comprising¹ the women's-apartments, unless these were in an upper-story. Now wherever² there was an upper-story it was necessary to go up and down-on³ a ladder. The walls were sometimes made-of-brick,⁴ and housebreakers wishing to steal would-dig-through⁵ the walls. Some⁶ houses⁷ had windows in the walls, others⁸ had none; usually the light entered through the opened roof of the peristyles. By night they used lamps⁹ within the house, but when¹⁰ the master walked through the dark streets a slave went ahead with¹⁰ a torch; other attendants followed-after him for-the-sake-of security.

X. THE HEAVENS.

If¹ you go out of the house by night and stand in the open street, among² many other² things you notice¹ also³ the following. The sun⁴ you do not see in the sky, for it is night, but⁴ you see unnumbered stars and, as⁵ the month goes on, sometimes⁶ you see the moon and sometimes⁶ (you see it) not. If¹ at any time the earth comes between the sun and the moon there occurs¹ an eclipse of the moon. Moreover, whenever⁷ a storm occurs and either rain or snow or hail falls from the clouds, then it is no longer ⁸ possible to see either ⁸ the moon or ⁸ the stars. And oftentimes by day, before sunset, when thunder and lightning have burst forth from the clouds, a thunderbolt strikes either a tall tree or a high house ; (high I say), for ⁹ the god of the sky bears-ill-will-towards ¹⁰ the great ¹¹ things ; the small things annoy ¹² him not at all.

XI. THE YEAR.

The year is divided into twelve months. But in Greece these months had neither the same ¹ names nor the same beginning that ours have. For at Athens they called their ² first month Hecatombaion, which corresponds ³ nearly to the seventh ⁵ month of our year. The thirty days of each month were divided into three decades. The seasons of the year were reckoned sometimes ⁴ as three, sometimes ⁴ as four, and-then-again ⁴ even seven. The four seasons were Summer, Autumn, Winter, Spring. Now of these seasons the summer and the winter each had four months, but the two others each had two only.

³ use εἶναι.

⁴ use ἄλλοτε with μὲν . . . δέ . . . δέ.

⁵ The Attic year began with the summer solstice.

XII. HELIOS.

In the olden-time things¹-in-heaven¹ were arranged not as they now are, but differently. For the earth was flat, and Océanus flowed-round about the earth. And towards dawn, Eos,² the rosy fingered goddess, upon a chariot, (which was) borne along by³ the swift horses Lampus and Phaethon, climbed-up the sky to announce⁴ both⁵ to gods and⁵ to mortals that⁶ Helios was coming. Not-long after⁷ forth came Helios himself,⁸ he also borne-along in a four-horse-chariot. The names of his horses I know well, but will not mention. And he driving through the air and along the vault of heaven, looked-down-upon all the works of men. At evening he descended into Oceanus in-the-west and the darkness came on again. After sunset, in a golden boat made by Hephaestus, Helios sailed-around again to the east.

Thus different was the world in ancient times; but the same things must needs⁹ happen even nowadays¹⁰ in Asia; for the Great Lama there denies¹¹ that⁶ the earth is spherical.

XIII. THE ARMY IN XENOPHON.

Each part of the army was commanded by¹ a general and was divided into companies-of-one-hundred.² A captain commanded³ these companies-of-one-hundred,² which had two sections-of-fifty-each⁴ or four of-twenty-five-each.⁴ These (latter) were called enomoties,⁵ because the twenty-five soldiers in the enomoty, being messmates, gave-an-oath⁶ and pledged-their-faith⁶ to one-another. ✓ The word 'taxis' in the Greek tongue, among¹⁰ many other⁸ things, also means⁷ sometimes two companies-of-one-hundred² joined. The commander of this 'taxis' was called a 'taxiarch.'⁹

The Greeks had but few horsemen;¹⁰ the infantry¹⁰ was of-all kinds. The light-armed — that is, the bowmen and the slingers — had no shields and did not engage-in-hand-to-hand conflict;¹¹ but the peltasts, these also being light-armed soldiers, had round-leather-covered-shields.¹² ✓ The heavy-armed had the following armor: on the head the helmet, around the chest the cuirass, around the legs the greaves, and in-addition-to¹³ these they carried¹⁴ a large shield, a¹⁵ huge spear, and a¹⁶ sword or sabre.

At first they proceeded without any disagreement,⁷ the young man riding upon the ass, and the master of the ass walking beside him. But at mid-day, when⁸ the sun grew hot, they all stopped to rest, and the two men fell-to-disputing⁹ as to¹⁰ which should rest under the ass's shadow. EXERCISES. PART II.

XXV. ASSAULT ON A TOWN.

There was one place which was the barbarians' capital city. In this the enemy had-all-assembled.¹ Now around this was a ravine exceedingly deep, and the approaches to the place were difficult. So then, when the Greeks were not able *by-fighting*² to take the place, they³ attempted to withdraw: but, *as*⁴ the enemy attacked them, they could not go away; for the descent from the place into the ravine was wide-enough-for-one-only.⁵ Therefore, they sent-for Miltiades, who was-in-command-of⁶ the heavy-armed-men.

When these arrived the Greeks sang-the-pæan, and the trumpet sounded, and the hoplites charged on-a-run, and in-addition⁷ the missiles were borne-along together; javelins, arrows, sling-stones,⁸ and very many stones from the hand;⁹ there were some¹⁰ soldiers also who¹⁰ applied fire. Consequently, on account of the multitude of the missiles, the enemy left both¹¹ the stockade¹² and¹¹ the towers.

Consequently Nearchus and Philopœmen *throwing-down*¹ their arms, climbed-up (clad) in their tunics only, and one² drew-up another² and (then) another had-climbed-up³ and the stronghold was taken,³ as it seemed. And the targeteers and the light-armed running-up,¹ each plundered whatever he⁴ could.

Now there was an acropolis within, where many of the enemy had-taken-refuge.⁸ The heavy-armed halted-under-arms,⁶ some⁶ around the palisades, and others⁶ along the street leading⁷ to the acropolis. Then indeed⁸ the Greeks plundered all the city outside⁹ of the Acropolis. But when the Greeks began to retreat, many with¹⁰ wicker-shields and spears and greaves and Paphlagonian helmets ran-out-on (them) from-within, and others climbed-up on the houses, which-were⁷ on each side of¹¹ the street leading⁷ to the acropolis; consequently, it was not safe to pursue the enemy to the gate which led⁷ into the acropolis. (This you can understand¹²) for¹² they actually hurled-down great beams from-above so that¹³ it was dangerous both to remain and to go-away; and the night which-was-coming-on¹⁴ was a cause-of-fear.¹⁵

For all-of-a-sudden *one of the houses*² on the right blazes-up, *some-one-or-other*³ having-set-fire-to-it.⁴ When it fell-in, the enemy fled from the houses on the right. Miltiades, noticing⁵ this, commanded⁶ to set-fire to the houses on the left also, and these, *inasmuch as they were*⁷ wooden, were *soon on fire*⁸ so that⁹ the enemy fled from these also. Then Miltiades commanded the soldiers to bring fagots into *the space between*¹⁰ themselves and the enemy, and to set fire both to these and to the houses by¹¹ the stockade itself, that¹² the enemy might *turn their attention*¹³ to this.

XXVIII. THE ELEPHANTS.

The *Indians*¹ hunt elephants in the following manner: Having chosen² a level place they dig a ditch around-about (it) five fathoms³ in width⁴ and four⁵ in depth.⁴ At⁵ one place they make a crossing *by-bridging*⁶ the ditch. Then they put-on (it) *loose-dirt*⁷ and much grass, in order that⁸ the elephants may suspect nothing.⁹ Within the enclosure they place three or four tame elephants, and then the wild elephants come in by-night in-a-herd. Thereupon the men, quickly *taking-away*¹⁰ the bridge, mount upon those of *their*¹¹ elephants *which-are*¹² especially strong and well-broken. The tame elephants *fight-against*¹³ the captured elephants *when-they-are*¹⁴ worn-out by hunger and thirst. The men now bind-together the feet of¹⁵ the wild elephants *after-they-have-been*¹⁴ subdued and thrown-down,¹⁴ throw¹⁶ nooses¹⁷ around¹⁶ their necks, and themselves mount on them as-they-lie-there.¹⁴ Afterwards they cut into their necks with a sharp sword and bind around the noose along⁵ the wound. And thus the elephants become obedient.

Once-on-a-time *I*⁷ actually saw an elephant playing-the-cymbals while⁸ others danced; *a-pair-of*⁹ cymbals was fastened¹⁰ to the front legs *of*¹¹ *the-one-who-was-playing-the-cymbals*⁴ and another cymbal (was attached) to the so-called proboscis. *The cymbal-player*⁴ beat with his proboscis the cymbal rhythmically in turn against each-of-his-two legs. XXXVIII. VOYAGE TO THE MOON. (Continued.)

On inspecting¹ the country we found *that it was*² inhabited *and*³ cultivated. By day we saw nothing from-thence, but as night *came-on*⁴ there appeared to us many other islands near by, some larger and some smaller, resembling *fire*⁵ in color,⁶ and there appeared also another land below, *which had*⁷ in it cities and rivers and seas and woods and mountains. This, therefore, we conjectured *was*¹⁰ the one inhabited by mortals.

One could⁶ learn their size *from the fact that*⁷ each of their feathers is longer and stouter than the mast of a large merchant-man. Now these Gypocentaurs *had orders*⁸ to *skim-along*⁹ the ground and¹⁰ to bring *any*¹¹ stranger *who*¹¹ should be found, *to*¹² the king. So then arresting¹³ us they take us *to*¹² him. But he,¹⁴ looking¹⁵ at us and making-a-guess from our dress, said: 'Strangers,¹⁵ you are¹⁶ Greeks, are you not?'¹⁶ And when we admitted it, 'How then,' said he, 'did you come hither, and¹⁰ pass through *such a tract of*¹⁷ air?'

EXERCISES. PART III.

XLV. SWELL-FOOT.

Laius, son of Labdacus and grandson of Polydorus, was King of Thebes. Now he learned from an oracle, that his son was fated to slay him. When, therefore, a son was born to him, he delivered him over, with his ankles pierced through, to a slave to expose on Mount Cithaeron. From this the boy was named 'Swell-foot.' The slave, pitying the child, gave him over to a shepherd, who brought him and gave him to Polybus and Merope, king and queen of Corinth. Here he was brought up with them as ¹ their son. After many years Oedipus learned from an oracle, that he was fated to slay his father. So then, supposing that Polybus was his father, he fled towards Thebes to avoid-slaying ² him.

As he was journeying he met and slew both Laius himself and his attendants.

Afterwards he became king of Thebes, since none knew that he had slain Laius. If you had then seen him ruling, you would have accounted him the happiest of mankind; but ³ it is necessary first to know the outcome of everything, and to remember that it has been well said by men of old, 'Do not praise ⁴ the day until the evening.'

² use τοῦ μή, etc.

³ add γάρ.

⁴ ἐπαινεῖν.

XLVI. OEDIPUS AND LAIUS.

Afterwards, when he had himself *become-king*¹ of Thebes, Oedipus tells Jocasta the queen about this, speaking as follows: 'I was fleeing the Corinthian land, that I might never see the accomplishment of the evil oracles, when there met me, as-I-journeyed, a charioteer and an old-man on a chariot drawn-by-colts, and they both *tried-to-drive*² me by violence from the road. Therefore in-anger I strike the charioteer, the one *who-was-trying-to-turn*³ me aside; but the old-man, watching me from the chariot, as I was-passing-by, fetched me a blow on my head with the double-goad. He, however, paid no equal penalty; for, stricken by this hand of-mine, backward he rolls from the chariot, and then I slay all.'

In time, Oedipus, learning that he was a parricide and that the oracles had their irremediable accomplishment, blinded himself by striking his eyes with the brooches of Jocasta's dress.

Now even if Oedipus had not slain Laius in this way and at this time, it would have come to pass in some way or other; for the oracles had so decreed. The tragic poets give many instances of such things, showing how fruitless it is for man to try to resist the will of the Fates, who rule even above Zeus himself.

XLVII. FLOOD-TIME IN EGYPT.

Once I went abroad to Egypt. Just at that season, as it happened, the Nile had overflowed its banks, and whenever this occurs, the whole of the land turns into a sea, only the cities rising above the surface, here and there like islands. Now I was bidden to a banquet in Memphis; so then, starting from Naucratis, we sailed straight across¹ the plain. If it had not been for the inundation, we should have been compelled to sail along the river by the city Cercasorus, where the Nile divides and forms the Delta. As it was,² sailing across the plain, we left the river on the left hand before we sighted Cercasorus, and passing by the pyramid of Cheops on our right, we arrived at Memphis and I went at once to my friend's house.

XLVIII. MEMENTO MORI.

Now concerning the other things which the Egyptians do, and what they eat, there is no need that I should write in detail: they eat bread and drink wine, and have all other things such as are necessary. That which I am going to tell is very remarkable. Whenever the guests have eaten enough and are about to taste the wine, a man carries around in a coffin¹ a small wooden corpse. This wooden image represents Osiris the king of the dead. As the man shows this corpse, he says to each of the company: 'Let us eat and be merry, for to-morrow we die.' So then, that evening in Memphis, when the man had said this, the others fell to *drinking*² immediately, that they might lose no moment of this short life, but my goblet stood there long unemptied, and, as Homer says, the appetite for banqueting failed me.

XLIX. BURIED ALIVE.

When the Greeks had come to Pontus, it seemed good to them to make an examination of the conduct of the generals during the descent to the sea. Amongst the accusations which were brought against the commanders, Xenophon was accused of having beaten a soldier while on the march. This drew from Xenophon the real story.¹ He admitted that he had struck the complainant, but had done so to punish him for his wickedness. 'I found you,' said Xenophon, 'driving a mule, and I compelled you to carry a wounded soldier, because the enemy were following close behind. Afterwards as I was passing by, I saw you digging a grave to bury the soldier, and I commended you, supposing that he was dead. As I stood pitying the dead man, he suddenly moved his foot. 'Why he is alive!' I exclaimed, but you declared, that, even if he were alive, you would not carry him further. Then, as you were clearly *shown up to be*² on the point of burying a man not yet dead, I struck you, it is true, once or twice. I had not time to do more, for the enemy were approaching, otherwise I would not have stopped until I had caused you also to have need of a bearer! When Xenophon had thus spoken, all the by-standers commended him.

L. NITOCRIS'S REVENGE.

Herodotus tells a story which is worthy of mention, about a queen of Egypt. The Egyptians, it seems, once on a time slew their king either through hatred of him or for some other reason which I cannot tell with certainty. They then chose as queen Nitocris, the sister of the dead king. When Nitocris became queen, she made the following plan to avenge her brother. She summoned to a banquet all the nobles whom she knew to have been concerned in the king's death. This banquet she commanded to be made ready in a large underground room. When they had all assembled and were feasting, Nitocris withdrew with the remark that she would now leave the men to drink their fill by themselves. Upon them, while they were pledging her health, she let in the river by a large channel, which had been so constructed as to fill the chamber before any escaped. Thus did Nitocris take vengeance upon her brother's murderers. She, it is said, fearing lest their friends should punish her in turn, flung herself into a room full of ashes.

LI. STORMING A STRONGHOLD.

The horrors of war have often been described, and *not least vividly*¹ has Xenophon detailed them in the fourth book of the Anabasis. The unfortunate Taochians, he tells us, were struck with terror by the approach of the Greeks. They therefore gathered together into a stronghold all their property, their wives and their little-ones, to save them from the on-coming enemy. The place where they had assembled was almost completely surrounded by a river and was moreover precipitous and difficult of access. The Taochians when assembled said one to another: 'Here let us stand firm and whenever the enemy shall approach, let us roll down stones upon them. On this height our wives and our children will be safe from their missiles, and if the enemy at last force an entrance we can at least hurl our children from these cliffs and fling ourselves *down on top*¹ of them, for it is better for us all to perish by our own hands than to come into the power of the enemy.' And this they did when the fight went against them. Before the victorious Greeks rushed in, the women flung themselves and their babes down the cliffs, and those men who were not already slain or wounded in the attack did the same. Thus does man treat his fellows, so that, if you should ask me whether men at war or wild beasts are the more cruel, I should not know² how to answer without hesitation.

LII. DARIUS SPRAINS HIS ANKLE.

It happened once upon a time, that Darius, king of the Persians, fell from his horse and sprained his ankle. When the king had suffered for a whole week, both day and night, and the native physicians were unable to cure him, he ordered them to be scourged and then to be put to death. Hearing, now, that there was a skilful physician among the prisoners of war, he summoned him in great haste. This physician was a Greek, Democedes by name, the most experienced in medicine of all the men of his time. Now Democedes feared that, if he should let his skill be known, he would never be allowed to depart from the Persian court. Therefore he denied that he was a physician. When threats were brought to bear, however, he admitted that he understood medicine, though insufficiently. In a few days he made the king sound again. Darius then presented him with two pairs of golden fetters, but afterwards, when Democedes asked why he doubled his chains, the king sent him to his wives and told the man who conducted him to say to them, that this man had healed the king. From them Democedes received much gold, and thereafter was held in great esteem at the court of Darius. Some time after he escaped to Crotona.

LIII. TITURIUS AND COTTA.

Titurius therefore, upon seeing Ambiorix in the distance urging on his men, sends his interpreter Cnaeus Pompey to him to ask *for quarter*¹ for himself and for his soldiers. Ambiorix² when addressed answers: 'If you want to have a talk with me, you may. I hope that I can induce my men to spare your soldiers. As to yourself, no harm shall be done to you if you entrust yourself to me, — on that I pledge my faith.'³ Titurius communicates this to Cotta, who had been wounded, and asks him whether he approves of stopping the fight and having a conference with Ambiorix, adding that he hoped he could secure⁴ from him their own and the soldiers' safety.⁴ Cotta vows he won't go to an enemy who is in arms, and he persists in his determination. After this, as a result of his cowardice, Titurius was ignominiously slain, while trying to obtain terms from Ambiorix. Cotta too was slain, but he fell while fighting bravely.

LIV. THE FALSE PROPHETS.

Among the Scythians it sometimes happens, that the king falls ill; ¹ whenever this occurs he sends for some of his prophets, of whom he has a large number. When they arrive, they say, as indeed it is expected of them, that some one has sworn falsely by the royal hearth and for that reason the king is ill. Now this matter is not without danger to the prophets. For the accused very naturally denies, that he has sworn falsely by the royal hearth and then it is necessary to send for more prophets. If now these also say the same as the first ones did, then ² it is clear to all, that the accused is guilty and his head is cut-off forthwith; but, if this is not the case, then the prophets who first gave an opinion, are themselves put to death in the following way. The attendants seizing them bind their hands behind their backs; they then place them upon wagons loaded with fagots, set fire to the wood and start off the oxen. The terrified animals rush along and do not escape until the pole has been burnt through and they have themselves been well scorched. The false prophets are burnt up completely.

LV. REGULUS.

The Carthaginians having suffered many disasters,¹ sent ambassadors to Rome to negotiate peace and an exchange of prisoners. The ambassadors accordingly sailed away, taking with them Regulus, the captive general of the Romans. When they had arrived at Rome, Regulus steadfastly advised the Senate not to exchange the prisoners,³ although he knew that he must needs return to Carthage for torture if the prisoners were not released. He advised the Senate thus, because he said he was not himself worth so much to the city, as to have so great a number of Carthaginian prisoners given up in return for himself only and the other Romans, few in number, who had been taken prisoners.

The Senate, therefore, resolved not to accept the proposals⁴ of the ambassadors. As Regulus was on the point of departing from Rome, his wife and the senators tried to detain him, but before they could finish their entreaties, he exclaimed, 'I will return to Carthage, for I have sworn to do so.' Returning to Carthage, he was put to death with the greatest extremities of cruelty and torture.² This story is told by the Roman writers; if the Carthaginians had been the writers they would perhaps have told a different tale.

LVI. XERXES IN A STORM.

The following story is told about Xerxes: Having been away from home on one occasion there overtook the ship, as he was sailing back to Asia, a mighty wind and storm. The king in fear called out, and asked the helmsman how they could come safe to land.¹ As the helmsman hesitated to reply, Xerxes urged him to tell his views without fear, for he saw that he had some plan. Then the helmsman replied, 'Master, we cannot reach land in such a storm as this unless some of these passengers disembark, for they are many, and the boat is *ready*² to sink.' Thereupon, the nobles of the Persians who were standing by, made their salâm to Xerxes and leaped into the sea, and thus the ship was brought safe to land.

Now whether Xerxes commanded the Persians to do this or whether they did it of their own accord, I cannot say; but even if they had not done so voluntarily, the king would have compelled them, or if they had all come safe to land he would have had them put to death. As it was,³ the king upon disembarking presented the helmsman with a golden crown and then commanded that his head be cut off; for he had destroyed many Persians.

This story is told about Xerxes.

LVII. CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS.

After Christopher Columbus had arrived at the island of Jamaica he came into great need of provisions, nor did he know ¹ how he was to support his soldiers and save himself.

There was nothing to do, it seemed, but to commit himself and those with him to the savages on the island. Just in time, however, it occurred to him in his perplexity ² that an eclipse of the moon was on the point of taking place. So then he did as follows. Sending for the savage chiefs, he told them that if they did not do all things for him that he desired, they would certainly suffer the most terrible calamities. He added that he would make a beginning by stopping the moon from shining.

At first the savages laughed at these threats, but as soon as they saw that the moon was turning black, just as Columbus threatened, they were struck with terror, and before the eclipse was over, fell at the commander's feet and offered him all that they possessed.

LVIII. THE ROYAL INVESTIGATOR.

A certain king of the Indians once contrived the following plan to discover what men were the most ancient upon earth. He gave two new-born infants of poor parents to a shepherd to rear, and charged him that no one should utter a syllable in their hearing, but that he should rear them on goat's milk in a deserted hut by themselves. The king did this, wishing to know what sort of a sound¹ the children would first utter.

Now the following circumstances occurred : For two years the children uttered no articulate word;¹ but one day, as the shepherd entered with the goat's milk, both the babies came running to him, tripping-up in their haste and crying, ' lacos ! lacos ! ' When the king heard this he sent men into all countries to inquire what people use the word ' lacos ' and what is its meaning. Now the messengers went away in the early summer and did not return until late autumn. On their return they said : O king, far in the north, where men of these parts would be unable to dwell on account of the cold, there dwell certain dwarfish-men who use wagons without wheels and drawn along upon the snow by dogs. These men call milk ' lacos. ' Consequently the king concluded that the men of the north are the most ancient of mankind.

The Greeks, however, say that the king handed over the children not to a shepherd but to some women whose² tongues he had first cut out. Whether this is so I know not, but the children's first word was, ' lacos. '

LIX. MOUNT ATHOS IN 1889.

There is a mountain, lofty and peninsular, Mount Athos by name, inhabited by certain priests called monks, and if you shall go thither you will see many things worth seeing. Sacred books are to be found there in great numbers, which the monks have copied. Also, in addition to the three thousand monks themselves there are the same number of male servants, there are also billy-goats, roosters, and tom-cats in abundance. But if you should search from crow of cock till set of sun, you would find never a woman; for there is no such thing there. A certain philologist, not the least esteemed among the Philhellenes of our time has published the results of his personal investigation,¹ writing as follows: 'When I say that butter was rare and eggs imported, I assume that the reader knows of *the great feature*² of Athos, which consists in the *absence*³ of *the greatest feature*⁴ of human life — woman, and all inferior imitations of her in the animal world. Not a cow, not a goat, not a hen, not a cat of that sex!⁵ And this for centuries!'

LX. MOUNT ATHOS. (Continued.)

Now if any one supposes that these men grow barbarous or savage, living there alone without womankind, he will misstake the mark widely ; both the monks and their servants are hospitable and gracious, as the above-mentioned writer affirms, and if differences arise amongst them they settle them sensibly in the court room by the help¹ of lawyers. No strife of tongues is heard upon the island. But the learned writer is also compelled, through love of truth, to mention one drawback. Life in Athos is vacant and spiritless. Not alone the monks and the servants, but also the servants, both men and boys, are listless and dull. No games are played about the towns, and if the cocks crow at all, their note seems like a wail, not a challenge, and if you will look out of your window on a moon-lit night you will see the tom-cats walking along the roof in deep dejection—see them, I say, for they utter no sound. If the monks had not taken possession of Athos, all would have been different.

LXI. A QUARREL IN CAMP.

Let none of you, judges, suppose that I have come here to accuse this Menon on account of any ordinary wrong ; for I have suffered such things that it makes me shudder even now to recall them. Last summer we went out on garrison duty to the Boeotian frontier, and, as it chanced, this Menon here tented near us : if this had not been the case, judges, never would it have happened to me to be insulted, maltreated, and finally almost killed in the following shameful fashion.

One day, as we were dining, we heard a tremendous noise, and peeping out of the tent we saw this Menon and *his crew*¹ beating our servants, alleging that the cooks smoked them out. We, as was natural, were very indignant, and bade them go away and stop playing their drunken tricks upon our servants.

But our saying this made matters so much the worse ; for, leaving the cooks, they attacked me and my messmates, and did not stop insulting us until they did such things as neither befit me to tell nor you to hear. Now we at this time lodged no complaint against them, partly through fear of further trouble and partly because we knew that even if we should tell the general, who was an easy-going man, he would at the most rebuke them, but regard me as a troublesome soldier.

Do *you*² now read the sworn-testimony of all this ! and do *you*³ stop the water !

LXII. ASSAULT AND BATTERY.

When the clerk had read the testimony, the plaintiff spoke as follows: One day last winter I supped at the house of Pandocus the fuller; for a guest-friend of ours happened to be staying in town. So then as I was returning, when it was already growing dark, there jumped down upon me from a house-top in a narrow street this Menon and Phanosthenes and several others. If they had not come upon me thus unawares¹ I might perhaps have resisted them or at least escaped; as it was, this was out of the question,² for Xanthias my slave, who was carrying the torch, went off on a run, dropping his torch so that it was extinguished. Consequently they tripped me up, stripped off my clothes, and so treated me as to bung up my eyes and cut my lip. That which was the hardest to bear was that Menon crew like a victorious cock as he stood right on my stomach, and clapped against his sides with his arms instead of wings. They then went off with my cloak, which was almost new, while I was carried home half-dead, clad in my shirt only. For mother and our maid-servants, when Xanthias escaped to the house and told them, came running out with screams, and not until I had been carried to the (public) bath and shown to the doctor was I able to speak. And when the doctor had examined me, he exclaimed: 'If you carry him home in this condition, he will die; take him to a house near by and see to it *that*³ you take good care of him.'

To prove now that I speak the truth I will present to you the witnesses of this.

LXIII. THE CROCODILE.

I will describe to you the nature of the crocodile. Sometimes you will see it in the river, sometimes on the land, for it is amphibious. It is especially fond of little Egyptians, and it eats them whenever it has the chance. Although it is a four-footed beast it lays eggs, and leaves them on the land. From these eggs, which are not much larger than goose-eggs, is hatched out the crocodile chick. This is very small in proportion to the egg. But it grows into a very large animal, so that it is sometimes seventeen cubits long, sometimes more. It has four short feet, but its tusks are long; its eyes resemble those of a pig. Herodotus says that it is able to move the upper jaw only, and that it is blind in the water. It is also related that the crocodile, lying concealed, is accustomed to cry like a child to entice its victim to itself. Hence the expression 'crocodile-tears.'

LXIV. THE SONG OF THE FATES.

Amongst many other things that the great poet of the Germans has written, he also describes the relentless gods of Greece in his 'Iphigenie auf Tauris.' He represents Iphigenia as telling how the old nurse sang to her and to her brother, when children, the 'Song of the Fates.'

'Well may the race of mortals fear the gods,' sang the old woman, 'for they hold the sovereignty in their eternal hands and can use it as it pleases them. Let him whomsoever they raise to honor fear them doubly; for if ever a quarrel arises at their feasts they hurl their guests, be they Titans or mortals, down into Tartarus, where the poor wretches wait in vain for justice. Thus it was with Tantalus. But the gods are pleased as they perceive the savor of the burnt offerings whirling around in the smoke arising heavenward¹ either from the altars in Mycenae or in Argos, nor do they care at all for men toiling and suffering and offering sacrifice. For Zeus and the other gods feast on the golden floor and cease not till it pleaseth them; or, if so they will, stride along from peak to glistening peak of Olympus, careless of mankind.'

If you would know more of this, you must read the words of the poets themselves.

LXV. THE FATES.

The names of the Fates were Klotho, Lachesis, and Atropos. While Klotho spun for wretched man his thread of life, Lachesis determined its length, and then came Atropos with her resistless shears to cut the thread. Whenever Lucian, godless fellow that he is, begins to write about the gods, he does not stop until he has said many impious things about the inhabitants of Olympus. For in mocking at Homer and the other poets, he declares that Zeus has certain windows in the floor of heaven resembling the mouths of wells and furnished with covers, and that sitting down by each he takes off the cover and enjoys the savor and listens to the requests. Now each man asks for a different thing, as follows, — ‘O Zeus, make my onions grow and my garlic.’ And another: ‘May I but plot against my brother without his knowledge!’ And another: ‘Ye gods, may it be granted me to gain my lawsuit!’ And among those who are sailing one asks for the north-wind to blow and another for the south-wind, and the farmer asks for rain and the fuller for sun. And when Zeus has received the offerings he claps¹ the covers on again and does not grant their requests.

Lucian also says that if you could see as the gods do, you would see the Fates overhead spinning, and a thread descending from the spindles upon each man like spiders’ webs. And if you look closely you will see all hanging in the air ready to fall whenever the thread can hold out no longer against the weight.

LXVI. THE PHOENIX.

There is in Egypt or somewhere in Arabia a wonderful bird called the Phoenix. Its picture I saw frequently in Suntown, but the bird I never saw. Now this is not to be wondered at, for the bird comes once only in five hundred years, and the last time it came to Suntown was about thirty-seven years before my visit. If what they say of him is true, he is of the following size and description.¹ Some of his feathers are golden and some red, in size and outline he resembles an eagle. What the bird does, however, is the most remarkable. He does not make his appearance until his father is dead, and he then comes to Suntown expressly to bury his dead parent in the temple of the Sun. He brings his father in an egg which he has moulded of myrrh. Now, as I said, I have never seen either the bird or the egg, but the people there affirm that he first makes the egg, and then, hollowing it out, puts in his father and plasters it up again; he then brings the egg, father and all,² to the temple in Suntown.

LXVII. FARMERS IN COURT.

A certain farmer brought suit against another, alleging that the latter had walled-off a conduit and that when a storm occurred, the water poured in from the road and ruined his farm. But the defendant declared that it was not a conduit, but itself a plot of farm-land, and told the jury that if they would go there they would find that a road ran between the plaintiff's ground and his own, and he added: 'My father, a little while before I was born, walled up the land to keep out the water which used to overflow from the road. If the plaintiff now admits, as he does, that the property is mine and not public land, he cannot claim that it is a drain; for, if you will visit the spot, you will see that there are fruit trees planted there, and, what is more, ancestors buried there, and yet who would ever think of doing that in a drain? What then was I to do? Was I to receive the water into my farm, and, *as soon as*¹ it had passed by the plaintiff's farm, lead it back to the road again? Surely that would be necessary unless I should let it go into the next neighbor's farm. The clerk will now read the testimony of my neighbors.'

LXVIII. SOCRATES IN PRISON.

All men have read of the trial and unjust condemnation of Socrates, and his disciples Xenophon and Plato have written much about what he said and did in the prison. For, though condemned to death, it was unlawful for him to be executed before the vessel returned which the Athenians send yearly to the god at Delos. He therefore remained a month in prison, refusing to attempt an escape, 'for,' he said to his friends when they tried to persuade him, 'if I should do that I should be a breaker of the law.' During this time, he taught his disciples about the immortality of the soul, persuading them that death is not the end of life, but a journey hence to another life where, as Pindar says,¹ the just receive a life without toil sunlit both by day and night. But Crito, his friend, weeping, thought only about death and asked him how they should bury him. Smiling on him, Socrates said that if they should catch him they might bury him in any way they pleased. Then he added that it was his corpse, not himself, that the attendants were going to lay-out and carry-out for burial when he was dead. Let no one, he went on to say, speak of me, Socrates, as buried here in Athens, but consider that I am gone far hence to the happiness of the blessed !

On one occasion also, when he noticed that the by-standers were weeping, he said, 'Now, what is this? Why do you weep? Do you not know that the *sentence of death was passed*¹ upon me by nature as soon as I was born?' But one of his friends, Apollodorus, who was present, replied, 'Yes, but, Socrates, I am grieved the most because I see you put to death unjustly.' The master,² stroking the young man's hair, replied with a laugh, 'Why, my dear Apollodorus, would you then prefer to see me put to death justly?' Thus bold was Socrates to meet death, not because he despised life, but because he knew that death was better than life. The last day in the prison his little children were brought to Socrates by the women of his household, who, as was natural, wept and bewailed him. He therefore, when he had arranged everything as seemed best, sent them away; 'For,' said he afterwards to his friends, when they also began to weep, 'I have heard that it is right to die in holy-silence.'³

LXX. DEATH OF SOCRATES.

Now he, freshly bathed, came and sat down with his friends. Towards sunset the servitor of the Eleven came with the man who was to give the drug. But Crito, seeing that the sunlight still lingered on the mountains as though reluctant to deliver Socrates over to night and death, bade him wait yet a little. But Socrates interrupting him said, 'Not so, Crito, for it would be absurd to be thus eager to live.' When the man brought the drug he drank it off readily and calmly. 'If up to this time,' said Phaedo in relating the circumstance to Echecrates, 'we had after a fashion restrained our tears, now we could do so no longer, and we all wept except Socrates himself. But he reproached us and made us stop *for*¹ very shame. After this he walked around the room until his legs grew heavy and then he lay down on the couch. Then the attendant examined his condition by pinching his legs, and showed us that he was growing cold and stiff. Even now Socrates was calm and self-possessed, but he said that whenever it reached his heart it would prove-fatal.² Before the end came, uncovering his head, he said to Crito that he owed a cock to Aesculapius and bade him pay it and not neglect it. These the last words of Socrates caused us much discussion, but in case any one shall ask you what he meant by this you may answer that the 'master' wished to offer a thank-offering to Aesculapius because he had healed him of mortality.³

LXXI. Cf. HERODOTUS, VI. 1-3.

The story of the origin¹ of the war between² the Persians and² the Greeks is a complicated³ (one). How Histiaeus persuaded⁴ Aristagoras to revolt⁴ is described by Herodotus in the thirty-fifth chapter⁵ of the fifth book. Artaphernes the governor of Sardis knew this exactly,⁶ and when Histiaeus pretended⁷ that he knew nothing about it, the former remarked that the *real state of the case was*⁸ that⁹ Histiaeus cobbled the shoe and Aristagoras put it on. Histiaeus, therefore, fled that night and came to Chios. But the Chians said among themselves: 'If this man has been so deceitful towards others, he will play us also some trick.'⁸ So they bound him and did not release him until¹⁰ they learned that he was not friendly to Darius.

Now after he had been released, not even then would he tell the real¹¹ reason why he had led Aristagoras to revolt from the king, but, in order to terrify the Ionians, he said: 'Had I not done so, the great king would have caused¹² the Ionians to emigrate¹² from Ionia.'

The Phocæan general, Dionysius, made-a-speech¹ and told the Ionians that a contest was set before² them whether they should be free-men or slaves ; but that they should trust him and he would guarantee, if the gods treated them fairly, that their enemies either would not join battle at all,³ or else would be conquered by them.⁴

In consequence of this harangue⁵ the Ionians entrusted their affairs to Dionysius. For seven days he gave the Ionians much toil. He taught the rowers how to make-the-(manceuvre-of)-cutting-the-enemy's-line. The marines moreover he trained-in-full-armor so that the Ionians, unaccustomed to⁶ so much labor, declared that they would no longer obey⁷ him.

If the Ionians had obeyed Dionysius, or if they had all proved loyal⁸ to one-another, they might perhaps have conquered the Phoenicians ; as it was, the most of the Samians sailed away from the battle back again to Samos.

The captains⁹ of eleven Samian triremes,⁹ however, refused to withdraw and, remaining, proved themselves brave men ; and whoever now, says Herodotus, goes into their forum will there find the names of these men written upon a votive-slab.

After Miletus had¹ been captured, the Persian naval force captured the islands situated near the mainland. Both the islands and the cities on² the mainland fared ill at-the-hands-of³ the Persians, but they were not captured in the same manner; for, whenever⁴ the barbarians take an island, they catch⁵ the inhabitants (as though) in-a-net.⁵ They do this by⁶ joining hands from sea to sea and then marching across the whole island.

The captives, however, as was said above,⁷ all alike⁸ fared ill; for some were killed and some were carried off to the king while the barbarians were burning the cities, temples and all.

After this the naval force sailed into the Hellespont to subdue all the strongholds which⁹ had not previously come under the power of the king. They accordingly captured the cities and the forts in the Chersonese and in Thrace, amongst them Selymbria. The inhabitants of Byzantium, however, — the city now called Constantinople,¹⁰ — voluntarily went off and left their land so that they saved themselves (alive) and settled a new city named Mesambria. If they had remained in Byzantium, they would have been captured or would have perished when the city was taken.

When Darius wanted to know whether the Greeks intended to make-war against him, he sent his heralds in-all-directions¹ throughout Greece to demand earth and water for the king. (This was the custom)² for by giving earth and water the inhabitants made it clear³ that they gave up the sway⁴ both on land and on sea.

Now the majority of the dwellers-on-the-mainland and all the islanders gave earth and water to the heralds, but the Athenians and the Lacedaemonians were not so spiritless. The latter threw the heralds into a well, and the former threw them into the Barathrum, with the remark⁵: 'There now⁶! take earth and water to your king.' There is still shown to-day at Athens a gully, said to be the Barathrum, not far from the Pnyx⁷; but if the Persian heralds were thrown into this they fared better than the others who were thrown into the well at Sparta; for this gully is neither very precipitous nor very deep. This story about the Athenians and the Lacedaemonians is told by Herodotus in the one hundred and thirty-third chapter⁸ of the seventh book to explain⁹ why Xerxes did not send to Athens and to Sparta to demand earth and water.

Darius was angry with the Athenians because they had maltreated¹ his heralds, and with the Ionians because they had burned² Sardis. Accordingly, in order that he might remember the Athenians, one of his servants always used to remind him, whenever his dinner was put-before him, by saying three times: 'Master, *don't forget*³ the Athenians.'

The Persian ships, however, first sailed against and subdued several islands and also captured Eretria in Euboea. From there they sailed to the plain of Marathon, because Hippias told them that this place was at once the nearest to Eretria and also the most suitable for cavalry manœuvring.

The Athenians had already assembled at Marathon. One of their ten generals was Miltiades, who had been sent out to the Chersonese after the death of his uncle Miltiades, whose namesake he was, and that of his brother Stesagoras. There he had become powerful⁴ by treachery.⁵ It was fated indeed that he should perish dishonored⁶ and in a way worthy of his former treachery; but in the meantime he saved Hellas from the barbarian.

Cimon the father of Miltiades had met-his-death at-the-hands-of the sons of Peisistratus, although he had allowed Peisistratus to be proclaimed victor in an Olympic-contest which he had himself won.

Over against Cimon's tomb are buried also the mares that won for him the three Olympic-contests.

The following story is told about the herald that was sent to beg the Spartans to bring aid to the Athenians and not to allow the barbarians to enslave Hellas.

The courier's name was Pheidippides. He had passed through Argos and was just crossing-over¹ the Parthenian ridge above Tegea, when the god Pan met him and called upon him by name and said: 'Why do you Athenians make no account of me although I have often-times been of use to you and, what is more, shall be again? Carry this message back to the City.'²

In consequence of this the Athenians honored Pan with a torch-race³ and sacrifices; and a cave under-the-brow-of the Acropolis is to-day shown as a sanctuary of Pan to those that visit Athens.

The Athenians, moreover, believed that the god aided them at Marathon and terrified the enemy. Consequently, later on, whenever a panic⁴ fell-upon⁵ an army, the Greeks called it πανικόν.

Pheidippides, however, reached Sparta from Athens on-the-second-day,⁶ and the Lacedaemonians could easily have brought aid to the Athenians, had not a certain religiousness⁷ or superstition⁸ hindered⁹ them. After the full-moon they marched off to Athens so fast that they reached there in-three-days,⁶ too late indeed for the battle, but just in time to go out to Marathon and see the dead Medes.

When the two armies had been drawn-up-in-line and it was known to the Greeks that the victims were favorable, the Athenian rushed over¹ the space-between-the-lines. To the Persians it seemed² to be madness in the Athenians thus to run at full speed when they were going to fight. The Greeks, however, although they were few in number and had run more than a mile, fought none the less manfully when they closed with the barbarians. If they had advanced more slowly,³ the Persians might easily have resisted them — as it was,⁴ the battle lasted⁵ a long time.

The Greek centre was at first defeated by the Persians who, with the Sacae, had been stationed opposite this part. The Athenians conquered both the wings of the barbarian army and put them to flight, but did not pursue them; for they saw that their own centre was being worsted. 'Let us rather,' they cried to one-another, 'attack the Persians themselves and drive⁶ them back into the sea.' Accordingly they drew together their right and left and pursued the Persians to their very ships.

In this struggle at the ships about six-thousand four-hundred barbarians fell, and they in turn slew many famous Athenians and among them Callimachus, the War-archon, and also Cynaegirus, the son of Euphorion. The latter was slain, indeed, with difficulty, for he had laid hold of a vessel's stern and would not¹ let go until some-one of the Persians chopped off his hand with an axe.

After the Athenians had captured seven ships the Persians backed out the remaining vessels, wishing to sail quickly around the promontory² of Sunium so as to reach the City³ ahead of the Athenians. It is said that some one signaled⁴ to the Persians, after they had already put-to-sea,⁵ by showing a shield from the top of Mt. Pentelicus⁶ or somewhere else.⁷ A shield was, indeed, held up, but who was the one that showed it I cannot⁸ tell.

Meanwhile the Athenians marched across Attica to bring help to the City, and had⁹ already encamped in the Heracleum by the time that the barbarians arrived at Phalerum. Xerxes then said that if they subdued the Athenians and their neighbors in the Peloponnesus, he would make Persia coterminous with heaven's vault; because there was no other race so bold as to pluck up heart⁷ and fight the Persians. Views opposed to each other must needs be spoken in order that men may select the better. If thy father Darius had taken my advice he would never have made an expedition against the Scyths, for I told him that they were a people hard to master² because they were nomadic, living in wagons, not in cities.

'But Darius would not yield to me; bridging the Bosphorus and the Danube, he went across against them. If now Histiaeus, the tyrant of Miletus, had broken down the bridge as the Scyths requested, it would have been all over with Darius; as it was, he lost many brave soldiers.

'Now you, Xerxes, intend to march into Greece, and you say that you are going to bridge the Hellespont and so cross over. These Greeks, however, are far braver than the Scyths, and it might happen that they would be the victors either on land or on sea; for you know that the Athenians and Plataeans alone, without the Lacedaemonians, conquered Datis and Artaphernes at Marathon.

That no such thing might happen again Xerxes prepared beforehand to dig (a canal) through the isthmus between Athos and the mainland. The width of this isthmus is about one mile and a half,

Now those *entrusted with*³ this work drew a bee-line across the isthmus over against the city Sane, and proceeded-to-dig after parceling out the land among the (several) nations.

If they had all been as provident⁴ as the Phoenicians, the canal⁵ would have given them less labor; as it was, in-the-case-of⁶ most of them the edges of the excavation kept-crumbling-in because they made the opening above of the same width as the channel below was ordered to be, while the Phoenicians made it twice as large above, and gradually contracted the channel.

Nearly the same thing has happened *in our own times*⁷ near Corinth: for those who were digging a canal across the isthmus made the excavation too precipitous and so in like manner the edge caving-in, killed many workmen.⁸

The canal in our times¹ across the Isthmus of Corinth was made that ships might sail through² from the Gulf³ of Corinth into the Saronic⁴ Gulf, and so shorten⁵ the route,⁶ and also that there should no longer be any necessity to double Cape Malea,⁷ which is apt⁸ to be dangerous when the wind blows.

But Xerxes, if he had not been desirous of showing-off his power, might have ordered his soldiers to drag the ships across⁹ the neck-of-land at Athos; nevertheless out of arrogance he compelled them to dig a canal so wide¹⁰ that two triremes might sail through together.

While these were digging the canal and others were bridging the Strymon and the Hellespont, the infantry had collected at Critalla. This was a place somewhere (or other) in Cappadocia, situated, as it would seem, on-the-other-side¹¹ of the river Halys; for Herodotus says that Xerxes crossed this river and entered Phrygia when he started to march to Sardis. If now Xerxes marched southward¹² to Celaenae, he must have left behind him the Royal Road which leads from Susa¹³ to Sardis. Perhaps he marched to Celaenae with a part of his army only; perhaps he did not come here until he was returning from Greece.

Xerxes spent the winter at Sardis and word-was-brought to him there that the bridge at the Hellespont and also the canal and other works at Athos were finished. For the king had commanded the engineers¹ to make break-waters² about the mouth of the canal to keep-out the surf. All this, Herodotus tells us, had been thoroughly executed.

At this time the king was made very anxious by an eclipse of the sun, which suddenly occurred in perfectly fair weather, so that he did not venture³ to set out for Abydos until he had learned from the Magi what the divinity foretold by this phenomenon. When the Magi had explained it to him he marched on in exceeding good cheer. For an eclipse of the Greek cities was foretold, because the prophetic-representative of the Persians was the moon, and thus what the god was foretelling was that day would turn into night for the Greeks.

Pythius, however, the Lydian, who had offered great presents to the king, and whose five sons were making the expedition with the king, was terrified at this portent in the sky and said to himself: 'Perhaps the god means the sun to represent the Persians, and thus foretells by a riddle⁴ some great mischief for the Persians. Come now! I will beg-off⁵ my eldest son that one at least of my boys may remain to me.'

Xerxes was much enraged at Pythius for¹ wanting to beg-off² his son from¹ going to Greece, and he told him that instead of³ venturing to make any mention of his son he ought himself to accompany the king with his household, wife and all.

'You, to be sure,' added Xerxes, 'offered me guest-presents, but I excelled you in benefactions, and now you and four of your sons shall get off safe by reason of these same guest-presents; but you shall pay the penalty, although no suitable one, with the life of your eldest son.'

When he had thus spoken, the executioners, at⁴ the command of the king, asked which son was the eldest, and taking him they cut him in two. The two sections of the dead man were deposited on the right and left of the road respectively that the army might march between them and learn never to be presumptuous.⁵

When this gruesome⁶ business⁷ had been accomplished Xerxes marched on until he came to the plain of Troy and to the Scamander river. Now this river, famous⁸ though it is, was not large enough to water⁹ the cattle, but its stream gave out when they drank of it: so great was their number.

While Xerxes was sacrificing bulls to Athena, in the night the soldiers began to think either about the bisected¹⁰ son of Pythius or about the dead Trojan heroes, and a panic fell upon the camp.

Before Xerxes arrived at Abydos, the inhabitants of that place had made a raised-throne of white marble that the king might review the army in case he wished to do so. Accordingly, upon¹ his arrival the king seated upon the throne looked down upon the sea covered with ships and the coast and plain full of people.

To please the king a boat-race also took place, and the fact² that a Sidonian vessel won-the-race seemed to the king propitious;³ for it portended⁴ that the barbarian should conquer the Greek. Suddenly, to the astonishment of⁵ all the by-standers, Xerxes burst⁶ into tears. When his uncle Artabanus, who had accompanied⁷ him to Abydos, asked him why he wept, he made answer and said: 'When I come to reflect upon it, I remember that not one of these men will be alive one hundred years hence.'

This (is what) Xerxes said; but his uncle consoled⁸ him with a remark⁹ worthy of a tragic poet, to the effect that¹⁰ no-one on earth was born-to-be so fortunate as not to wish again and again that he had never been born. 'Since this is so,' he added, 'I consider death a most welcome refuge from this life of-sore-distress.'

After this Artabanus at parting advised the king not to lead the Ionians against the Athenians. 'For Athens,' he said, 'is the city of their ancestors, and the Ionians will not prove¹ themselves so unjust toward their ancestors as to fight against their mother-city. But if while proving faithful to their ancestors, they betray² your cause³ on the-eve-of⁴ battle, they may be able to do you much harm.'

But Xerxes told Artabanus that in this opinion about the Ionians he was more-in-error than in his original⁵ opinion about making the expedition.

'If the Ionians,' said he, 'had wished so to do, they could have destroyed Darius and all who went up with him against the Scyths. And, aside from this, we have their wives and children and property as hostages⁶; for they must needs leave all these behind as hostages in our land. So keep-up a good heart while I am away from home, for to you I entrust all my sovereign power.'

Thus Xerxes kept his word⁷ that Artabanus should not go on the expedition, but should remain behind with the women; in the words of Homer, however, 'very deftly, divinity-like,'⁸ he turned disgrace⁹ into a compliment.¹⁰ As it turned-out,¹¹ it was indeed fortunate¹² for Xerxes that he had left behind him so trusty¹³ a guardian¹⁴ of his household and his sceptre.

Although nominally the king was marching against Athens only, in reality¹ he was making an expedition against the whole of Greece. Some of the Greeks were in great fear because they had not given earth and water to Darius: for (they felt that)² they would now, left-thus-to-themselves,³ be unable to resist the Persian while the rest of the Greeks were eagerly going over to the side of the Medes. Let me now tell you what is clearly⁴ the truth, or at least what seems clear to me. If the Athenians had not opposed Xerxes on the sea, the Peloponnesus would have been left to itself, nor would any wall built across the Isthmus have been able to save it. For even if the Spartans, either at Thermopylae, or at the Isthmus, or in their own land, had died nobly while fighting for Hellas, the king would still have held possession of the sea and could have sailed around and could have effected-a-landing⁵ somewhere (or other) in the Peloponnesus. The Athenians, therefore, both before at Marathon and now again ten years later,⁶ proved themselves, next to the gods, the preservers of Greece. And not only did they repulse⁷ the barbarian Persian, but by their love for the beautiful⁸ they tempered⁹ the vulgarity¹⁰ of the victorious Roman.

When the Persians were unable to force-a-passage-(at)¹ Thermopylae the king was at a loss until Ephialtes, a man from Malia, betrayed the Greeks by² telling him of the by-path which³ led over the mountain to Thermopylae.

In after days a certain Athenades killed this Ephialtes for another reason, but he received the reward which the Pylagori had set upon the traitor's⁴ head.

Now it is a moot point⁵ about the traitor whether it was Ephialtes or some one else. But the Pylagori would not have set the price upon the head of Ephialtes unless they had learned that he was the man, nor would Ephialtes otherwise have gone into banishment: to be sure,⁶ Onetes⁷ or some one else might have been acquainted with the by-path, but (there is no use of arguing), for⁸ I say that Ephialtes was the traitor. Ephialtes accordingly guided Hydarnes and his command around by this by-path. Starting out from the plain about (the time of) lamp-lighting and crossing the Asopus river, they marched all night, and not till day was just dawning did they arrive at the top-of-the-mountain.

The Phocians who were guarding the mountain withdrew to the summit to fight it out⁸ there, but Hydarnes and his men, ignoring them, hurried down the mountain.

The defendant had at first been charged with removing an olive-tree, but when his accusers found that they could not make good⁷ this accusation, they said that it was the stump only that had been removed. Now at Athens to remove even the stump of an olive-tree was considered⁸ a sacrilege.⁹ The penalty¹⁰ was banishment¹¹ and confiscation¹² of (one's) property: consequently the defendant was contesting at once for his country and for his property.

To understand why the Athenians made this law about the olive-stumps it is only necessary to remember what Herodotus tells about a sacred olive-tree which was in a temple on the Acropolis at Athens. When the Persians burned the temple the olive-tree was burned-up with it, but on the second day after this (event) they say that a sprout of a cubit's length had shot-up from the burnt stump.

Now Callistratus rented the land of me within five days after I bought it, and although he cultivated it for more than a year, he will tell you that he never saw an olive-tree of *any sort or description*¹ on the place. Surely if there had been one there he must needs have known about it. I am, however, accused of having cut down the olive-stump some six or seven years after I bought the land while I was myself managing the farm.' And yet how could I have cut down a tree where none had ever been seen by those who had rented the land for many years? Methinks, judges, I have clearly convicted my accuser of falsehood. But I should like to have him tell you what advantage would have accrued to me if I had removed the stump. This offer Nicomachus refused. And yet it is evident that I ran much the greater risk; for slaves are naturally ill-disposed towards their masters, and one would suppose that they would be glad enough⁴ to denounce them and so be set free in accordance with the law.⁵ Nicomachus, on the other hand, was exposed to no penalty if the slaves did not accuse me when put to the torture. 'Let me now, judges, have Eratosthenes up and cross-question³ him.'

Eratosthenes was then brought-up (as a witness), and, when asked whether he arrested Polemarchus, said that he had done so out of fear of the Archons. For the Senate, it seems, had been urged³ by some of the public-speakers to put the grain-dealers to death without trial.

When, however, he objected⁴ that this would be contrary to⁵ law, some of the public-speakers immediately got up and slandered him and said that he wanted to save the grain-dealers. Hence he accused the latter in the Senate to escape from this charge, and now he is unwilling to stop until they be either convicted or acquitted.

One of the grain-dealers was then commanded to-mount-the-witness-stand. Now at Athens, whenever the prosecutor chose to question⁶ the defendant, the law compelled him to answer.

If they could have shown that the grain thus bought up was retailed¹ always at the same price, they might have had some defence; as a matter of fact, sometimes there was a fluctuation² of a drachma in one day. If they had bought the grain a bushel at a time the price would not have varied² more.

They made all sorts of pretexts in order that they might sell the grain at a higher price. Greek Prose Composition Exercises for Writing Connected Greek Prose, with Introductory Notes on Syntax and Idiom, and Rules for Cases and Accent. By Professor FRANCIS G. ALLINSON, Williams College. 12mo, cloth, 213 pages. Price, $1.00.

THIS book has grown out of the author's personal experience in the class-room. It is intended for use in writing connected Greek prose.

Its special features are, Notes on Idiom and Syntax, a Summary of Rules for Cases and Accents, Exercises, carefully graded, and a general Vocabulary.

References are given throughout the introductory matter to the grammars of Goodwin and of Hadley and Allen.

Dr. Morris H. Morgan, Harvard College: I have carefully examined the book, and believe that it is a most excellent guide. Especially am I pleased with the fact that the exercises are based on real Greek models, and expressed in the English language. This book is not disfigured by the vile jargon which was invented by the adversary for particular use in such manuals, a language certainly spoken nowhere upon earth, and, I trust, not elsewhere. I hope the book will meet the great success it deserves.

Studies in Greek Accidence

By F. C. BARNES, Troy Academy, Troy, N.Y. 12mo, cloth, 81 pages. Price, 50 cents.

The Hellenica of Xenophon, Books I. AND II.

Together with Selections from the Oration of Lysias against Erastosthenes, and from Aristotle's Constitution of Athens. Edited with Notes by ROBERT W. BLAKE, College of New Jersey, Princeton. 16mo, cloth, 248 pages. Price, $1.20.

THE Introduction contains an outline of the Peloponnesian War, a brief review of Xenophon's life and works, and a discussion of the relation of the Hellenica to Thucydides.

The notes supply all commentary needed to make the subject-matter fully understood; and references have been made to the latest edition (1892) of the grammars of Goodwin and Hadley-Allen, as well as to Goodwin's Greek Moods and Tenses.

Ten Selected Orations of Lysias

Edited, with Notes, by Professor GEORGE P. BRISTOL, Cornell University. 16mo, cloth, 180 pages. Price, $1.00.

THE aim of this book is to make available for class-room use more of the text of Lysias than is now to be had in our school editions. The orations selected are, On the Sacred Olive, Against Eratosthenes, For Mantitheus, On the Property of Eraton, On the Property of Aristophanes, Against the Grain Dealers, Against Pancleon, For the Cripple, Against Diogeiton, and the Oration Delivered at Olympia.

The text is supplied with brief notes, containing references to the standard literature on the subjects of which they treat.

The Appendix contains just enough description of Athenian courts and legal procedure to make plain to the student the setting of the several speeches.

Alpha, a Greek Primer Introductory to Xenophon

By WILLIAM G. FROST, President of Berea College, Kentucky. Third Edition. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, 223 pages. Price, $1.00.

IN this book the inductive method is kept constantly in view, but is not allowed to dominate the plan of the work. The order of development abbreviates details, and places emphasis upon matters of practical importance. The grammar is used in a rational manner, giving a topical review of syntax, but without reference to exceptional usage.

Copious and varied exercises for reading connected prose, and for translating, are included in the book. An important feature is the carefully selected vocabulary of about six hundred and fifty words, including all that appear as many as seven times in the Anabasis, Books I.-III.

A. K. Potter, Teacher of Classics, High School, Springfield, Mass.: After using Frost's Greek Primer for five years, I am satisfied that no better book for beginners can be found. Its brevity, its simplicity, its insistence on the use of words rather than the study of isolated forms, its admirable introduction to the proper use of the grammar, its pervading liveliness — these are characteristics that seem to me worthy of especial commendation.

Professor J. L. Nuelson, St. Paul's College, Minn.: I am using with my beginners Frost's Greek Primer, and take delight in stating that the class is doing better work and is more interested in the study of Greek than any beginners' class I have taught yet. I ascribe the interest and the result accomplished to the excellent method of the Primer.

William Helmle, Principal of High School, Springfield, Ill.: The book has given excellent satisfaction, and I am more than pleased with it.

W. A. Edwards, Principal of High School, Rockford, Ill.: We are entirely satisfied with it, finding it far superior to any we have used.

Professor H. A. Rennert, University of Pennsylvania.: It is the best Greek book for beginners that has been written in this country, and I shall lose no opportunity to recommend it.

Professor H. S. Kritz, Wabash College, Crawfordsville, Ind.: You may be pleased to hear that I am having better success in teaching a beginners' class in your Primer than with any other book hitherto used.

The Iliad of Homer, Books I.-VI.

With Introduction and Notes by ROBERT P. KEEP, Norwich Free Academy; and Vocabulary by S. THURBER, Girls' High School, Boston.

Books I.-III., cloth	$0.90
Bound with Vocabulary, half leather	1.20
Books I.-VI., half leather	1.40
Bound with Vocabulary, half leather	1.60
Vocabulary to Iliad, I.-VI., paper	0.50

NO pains have been spared to make these the most useful and practical editions of the Iliad that can be put into the hands of a beginner.

The editions of Books I.-VI. contain a fac-simile of a page of the famous Venetian Manuscript of the Iliad.

Professor S. R. Winans, College of New Jersey, Princeton: The Homer will, from its completeness and perfect adaptation to the needs of beginners, distance all competitors. It is a superb edition in all respects.

Professor William Hyde Appleton, Swarthmore College, Pennsylvania: Besides the excellence of the notes, which are of course the main consideration in a book of this sort, I find the unusually varied introductory matter a most valuable feature. And not the least in value and interest for the youthful student will be, I think, the fac-simile from the famous Codex Venetus. As to the mechanical execution of the work, it certainly could not be surpassed. It seems to me that even in an edition de luxe it would be hard to find a fairer Greek page.

Professor M. W. Humphreys, University of Virginia: It is the most attractive and useful edition of the Iliad I have seen.

Professor M. L. D'Ooge, University of Michigan: Let me express my delight with Keep's Iliad. It is unquestionably the most attractive and most useful school edition of the first six books of the Iliad that has ever been prepared for English-speaking students. The Introduction, the Essay on Scanning, and the Sketch of the Epic Dialect, are each admirable in its way, while the notes in general seem well suited to the wants of those for whom the edition is designed.

Professor Edward B. Clapp, University of California: I like it very much. I will not say anything about its external appearance, which is charming, nor its typography, which is almost ideal. But the introductory matter suits me better than anything I have seen in a school edition; and after comparing the notes on the first book, line by line, with those in one of our most popular editions, I am convinced that they are better, fresher, and less mechanical.

Xenophon's Anabasis, Books I.-IV.

With Introduction, Notes, and Vocabulary by FRANCIS W. KELSEY, University of Michigan, and ANDREW C. ZENOS. 12mo, half leather, 568 pages. Price, $1.60.

THE plan of this edition in general follows that of the edition of Cæsar's Gallic War, by Professor Kelsey.

The Introduction aims to prepare the way for intelligent study of the Anabasis, by presenting an outline of the Expedition of Cyrus, a brief discussion of the Greek Art of War at the time of the Retreat, and a notice of the life and writings of Xenophon.

An important feature of the book is the Table of Idioms and Phrases immediately preceding the Vocabulary.

The typography of the text is exceptionally clear and open; the page is further relieved by the introduction of a line of English on each page. By this means the thread of the story is kept more clearly before the student.

The colored maps, plans, and illustrations make the book the most attractive school edition of this text ever published.

C. S. Halsey, Principal of Classical Institute, Schenectady, N.Y.: The notes are excellent; they furnish just the aid that is needed, and no more. Especially worthy of commendation are the Vocabulary and pages devoted to Idioms and Phrases.

John G. Wight, Principal of Girls' High School, Philadelphia, Pa.: For complete and comprehensive excellence — in respect to text, clear and exhaustive introduction, instructive illustrations, maps, notes, and vocabulary — it is unequalled by any text-book with which I am acquainted.

H. E. Cole, Principal of High School, Bath, Me.: It is the best English edition of Xenophon's Anabasis for the use of schools that I have ever examined. It will receive the unqualified commendation of classical teachers throughout the country.

Charles Louis Loos, President Kentucky University, Lexington, Ky.: This is a new contribution to Greek studies for which we teachers of Greek, and professors of colleges, and friends of Greek study, owe you real thanks. This book is an excellent text-book. The notes are admirably adapted to the wants and enlightenment of the student; the Introduction is worthy of its subject and object; and the text is in its typography a delight. The maps and illustrations are very helpful, and admirably executed.

IT is the aim of the author to furnish a book for beginners which shall be simple and interesting, and at the same time contain a large number of such words, phrases, and idioms as are of frequent occurrence in Attic Greek. The book contains no disconnected sentences; it consists of a series of carefully graded exercises for translation, beginning with the simplest stories, and ending with extracts adapted from Xenophon, Herodotus, and Lucian.

William C. Collar, Head-Master of Latin School, Roxbury, Mass.: It is one of the brightest and most amusing school-books that I have ever seen. We have used it for a number of years with great satisfaction.

The Olynthiacs and Philippics of Demosthenes

Selections from Lucian

With Introduction and Notes by Professor CHARLES R. WILLIAMS, formerly of Lake Forest University, Illinois. 16mo, cloth, 338 pages. Price, $1.40.

THE selections include The Dream, Charon, Timon, The Cock, Icaromenippus, Dialogues of the Gods, Dialogues of the Sea-Gods, and Dialogues of the Dead.

The general introduction has purposely been made long and full. So little in the college curriculum brings the student into contact with the second century of our era, that it is desirable to dwell at length on the characteristics of those times. The special introductions put the student into sympathy with the surroundings and object of each piece, and stimulate his curiosity to make the acquaintance of the piece itself.

Short Extracts from Lucian

With Introduction and Notes by CHARLES R. WILLIAMS. 16mo, cloth, 186 pages. Price, 80 cents.

THESE extracts are taken from the Selections from Lucian, and comprise the Dream, Timon, Dialogues of the Gods, Dialogues of the Sea-Gods, and Dialogues of the Dead.

Plato's Phædo

With Notes Critical and Exegetical, and an Analysis, by WILHELM WAGNER. Revised by Professor WILLARD K. CLEMENT, University of Idaho. 16mo, cloth, 199 pages. Price, $1.20.

THIS edition enters especially into the critical and grammatical explanation of the Phædo, and does not profess to exhaust the philosophical thought of the work, least of all to collect the doctrines and tenets of later philosophers and thinkers on the subjects treated by Plato.

References to the latest editions (1892) of the grammars of Goodwin and Hadley-Allen, and to Goodwin's Greek Mood and Tenses, take the place of the English authorities in former editions.

Plato's Apology of Socrates, and Crito

With Notes, Introductory Notices, and a Logical Analysis of the Apology, by WILHELM WAGNER. 16mo, cloth, 129 pages. Price, 90 cents.

Xenophon's Memorabilia of Socrates

With Introduction and Notes by Professor SAMUEL ROSS WINANS, College of New Jersey, Princeton. 16mo, cloth, 289 pages. Price, $1.20.

IN this edition the text is separated into convenient divisions by English summaries, which take the place of the customary argument prefixed to the chapters, and put a logical analysis of the text where it cannot escape the attention of the student. The notes are designedly compact, yet are believed to contain all that is practically useful to the student. The editor has endeavored to supply brief sketches of everything of biographical, historical, or philosophical interest; and, for the convenience of teachers, there have been added complete cross-references to the other works of Xenophon, as well as to Plato and Aristophanes.

Xenophon's Symposium

With Notes by Professor SAMUEL ROSS WINANS. 16mo, cloth, 90 pages. Price, 50 cents.

A Grammar of the German Language

Designed for advanced students. By Professor H. C. G. BRANDT, Hamilton College, Clinton, N.Y. Sixth Edition, with an Appendix containing Full Inflections, and a List of Strong and Irregular Verbs. 12mo, half leather, 321 pages. Price, $1.25.

IN this Grammar the distinguishing features are the complete separation of Inflection and Syntax; the historical treatment of Syntax; the development of grammar in the light of modern philology; the scientific analysis of sounds and accent.

In addition to Accidence and Syntax, the book contains chapters on Phonology, Historical View of Inflection, History of the Language, and Word-formation.

Professor Henry Wood, Ph.D., Johns Hopkins University: I like the grammar very much, and shall introduce it immediately to all my classes. It is a gift to scholars that will be highly appreciated.

Professor William H. Carpenter, Columbia College: It marks a distinct advance in language instruction in America, and ought to be in the hands of every teacher and advanced student of the German language.

Professor E. S. Joynes, South Carolina College: In its own sphere Brandt's German Grammar is facile princeps, and whatever helps to extend its use will be a benefit to German scholarship.

George O. Curme, Cornell College, Mt. Vernon, Ia.: It is the most scholarly German grammar ever published in America. It is a marvel of condensation, and contains the substance of many ponderous German philological works, all nicely arranged, and placed within the reach of American pupils. From practical experience with this grammar in the class-room for years, I can state that it is as good a working grammar as I have ever used, and, besides, is a good manual for studying the progressive development of the language. In this last respect Brandt's Grammar is unique among our German grammars.

A First Book in German

By Professor H. C. G. BRANDT. 12mo, cloth, 379 pages. Price, $1.00.

THIS book contains the chapters on Accidence and Syntax taken from the author's German Grammar, new indices, and also Lodeman's German Exercises.

Professor H. H. Boyesen, Columbia College, New York: It is an able and scholarly book. The syntax appears to me to be especially well done.

A German Reader for Beginners

With Notes and Vocabulary. By Professor H. C. G. BRANDT, Hamilton, College, Clinton, N. Y. 12mo, half leather, 420 pages. Price, $1.52.

THE aim of the editor has been to prepare a book which, first of all, shall be practical, supplying sufficient material to enable the pupil to read with ease ordinary German prose.

It is progressive, leading step by step from the simplest prose and poetry to matter of usual difficulty. No better graded book for beginners has ever appeared.

It is interesting, containing a large variety of selections, none of them trivial, and many of permanent value.

It is attractive in appearance, the generous space between the lines enabling the student to read the German text with ease.

The notes are scholarly and helpful, ignoring none of the real difficulties of the text, but allowing the student to master without assistance passages that require no special help. The vocabulary has been prepared with the utmost care, and has received the highest praise of competent critics.

Professor Albert S. Cook, Yale University: The matter in Brandt's Reader is interesting and skilfully arranged; the notes are judicious in selection and composition; the vocabulary is convenient and exceptionally clear.

Professor William H. Carpenter, Columbia College, New York: The book is admirable from beginning to end. It more nearly meets my views of what a German reader ought to be than any other book of the kind printed.

Professor H. C. O. Huss, College of New Jersey, Princeton: I do not hesitate to say that it has uncommon excellences, and I intend to adopt it next year.

Professor O. Seidensticker, University of Pennsylvania: Brandt's Reader answers all the requirements that can be made of a book of that description; it certainly is what it claims to be, — practical, progressive, interesting, and attractive. As there is no reader which so faithfully comes up to this programme, it will be put in the hands of our Freshman Class.

Professor W. T. Hewett, Cornell University: The selections have been made with admirable judgment, and the notes present an extremely valuable body of fresh comment and critical knowledge. No German Reader meets more clearly my views of what such a reader should contain. The vocabulary is worthy of high praise, and will facilitate a thorough knowledge of the structure of the German language.
